Russia, Japan Pledge Neutrality If Either Fights; British Smash Panzer Column in All-Day Battle In Greece; Nazis Take Bardia, Drive Into Egypt

Yugoslavs Drive Down Albanian Coast, Within 20 Miles of Capital

By the United Press

London (Monday), April 14. British forces have smashed and hurled back German Panzer forces in an all-day battle near the eastern end of the Anglo-Greek front below Salonika while Yugoslav troops in fierce guerilla assaults took a heavy toll of the invaders south of Belgrade, it was reported last night.

[Athens dispatches said Yugoslav troops smashing into Albania and scattering Italian resistance were reported without confirmation early today to have driven to within about 20 miles of the Albania capital of Tirana and the nearby Italian military port of Durazzo.

[The Yugoslav troops, which yesterday were reported to have seized heights in the Krabi Mountains near Tirana, were said here to be aimed particularly upon Durazzo in an effort to entrap and cut off escape for the Fascist forces in central Albania.]

The Greek radio jubilantly announced that "the prospects are excellent," with the new British-Greek line from the Adriatic to the Aegean "absolutely safe," as the week-old Balkan conflict enters what the Greeks called its second phase.

Do-or-Die Troops

The slashing counterattacks of the Yugoslavs, entrapping one entire Nazi armored column 38 miles south of Belgrade, was credited with slicing the Germans' thin lines of communication and staving off a full-force German attack down through Monastir Gorge upon the left flank of the British-Greek line.

An authoritative British statement said the Yugoslavs, fighting in do-or-die units, had hurled the Germans back and recovered lost territory in five sectors from below Belgrade to the Greek frontier.

The Greek radio announced that the main Yugoslav forces from the north, breaking through German lines of entrapment, had smashed into central and southern Serbia and that the second and fourth Yugoslav armies "already are counterattacking" after being reorganized.

Heavy Fighting Around Nis

"There is highly satisfactory information from both fronts," said the Greek radio early today. "The new positions chosen by the British-Greek allies are considered absolutely safe. Morale is very high

Tobruk Besieged; Severe Fighting Raging at Salum On Libyan Line

By International News Service

Cairo, April 13.—German and Italian armored forces in a lightning drive across east Libya broke into northwest Egypt and attacked the coastal town of Salum where a heavy battle was raging tonight after the Axis column, detouring around the British-held Libyan port of Tobruk, captured Bardia opposite the Egyptian border.

Two battles were in progress—one around Salum, inside Egypt about 10 miles east of the Libyan frontier, and the other around Tobruk where the British defenders fought to prevent Italo-German mechanized troops from completing an encirclement of the seaport.

Advices reaching Cairo indicated that the British garrison at Tobruk was not yet isolated, even though the Axis forces had already occupied Bardia, 80 miles to the east, in an amazing dash to the Egyptian border reportedly facilitated by the landing of gasoline from Luftwaffe planes for the refueling of Italo-German tanks and armored cars.

Nazis Expect Tobruk to Fall.

(In Berlin the German high command said the encirclement of the British at Tobruk had been completed and their capitulation was momentarily expected.)

Swarms of Royal Air Force bombers and fighters were hurled into a mighty aerial campaign designed to impede the German-engineered Axis push into Egypt—the first invasion of that country since the British expelled the Italians last December, and to aid the British garrison at Tobruk in its efforts to break through the Italo-German lines.

An R.A.F. Cairo communique announced low-flying British squadrons repeatedly bombed "a number of enemy tanks and other vehicles which were ready for an attack near Tobruk," destroying many of them and dispersing the others.

R.A.F. bombers and fighters also carried out harassing attacks on German-Italian airdromes, motorized columns and military positions in many parts of Cyrenaica (east Libya) and heavily machine-gunned supply caravans in the Gazala area of the northwest desert.

Sudden Axis occupation of Bardia, which was the first town seized by the British in their counter-invasion of Libya last winter, occurred Saturday after British troops had previously evacuated that point.

Despite the fact that Egypt has once more been invaded in an

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

"Jesus Christ Is Risen Today, Alleluia!"

Thousands of "Alleluia"-singing worshipers, headed by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, yesterday commemorated Jesus' Resurrection, under the canopy of the sky and in lily-bedecked churches.

Their voices rose from Arlington's sunny slopes, from small frame chapels on side streets, from tall-pillared cathedrals, and from fashionable St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, where the Roosevelts worship.

They sounded even at dawn at 5:34 a. m., when vested choristers stood with 4,000 other early-risers on the hill overlooking Fort Lincoln Cemetery, and rang out the eternal message of hope that is Easter's.

That hope in life eternal and in man's salvation was emphasized by Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson in a sermon that later was commended by President Roosevelt.

Dr. Wilkinson, St. Thomas' rector, drew a comparison between the Cape of Good Hope, called the Cape of Fear until its exploration, and the "cape of hope" of the Resurrection. The clergyman administered Holy Communion to the President in his pew, while Mrs. Roosevelt communed at the rail.

Earlier, thousands attended Arlington amphitheater services sponsored for the eleventh year by the Knights Templar, and this year in

The man with a place to lay his head in Washington last night was king.

The great tide of tourists which swept on the Capital from all parts of the Nation early Saturday—then estimated at 250,000—apeared possibly to have doubled in number yesterday, overtaxing the streets with automobiles and rendering more critical the already serious rooming situation.

Little incidents bespoke confusion. The Philadelphia men, Harold Junker and Michael Charok, arrived here on motorcycles to see the cherry blossoms. They rode, side by side, into the currents of dense traffic at Wisconsin and Massachusetts Avenues. They were swept apart. Later Junker appealed to police to help him locate Charok. At a late hour they had not succeeded.

Twice the crowds struck hard, first at Eighteenth and Church Streets Northwest where the President and Mrs. Roosevelt attended morning services in St. Thomas Episcopal Church; then, in the early afternoon, at the Tidal Basin, where the Columbia Light Opera Co. reenacted the Blossom Time

$1,500,000,000 New Defense Tax Planned

Leaders to Map Strategy at Session With Treasury Officials Tomorrow

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Congressional leaders and Treasury officials yesterday scheduled a "strategy meeting" on Capitol Hill tomorrow to map plans for a new national defense tax bill slated to raise a minimum of $1,500,000,000 and possibly up to $3,000,000,000 in new revenue.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, which initiates tax bills, extended the invitation to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and other officials as Congress reassembled after a ten-day Easter vacation.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan was designated by Morgenthau to present the Administration's view on the tax proposals.

Roosevelt Message Indicated

President Roosevelt indicated to Democratic leaders, meantime, that he may send a special message to Congress on the need for new taxes to help pay for the huge defense program, now expected to pass the $40,000,000,000 mark before the year is out.

President Roosevelt will leave during the week for a short vacation at Warm Springs, Ga., but the implication was that he would send the message before hearings are begun on taxes by the Ways and Means Committee on April 22.

During the past week President Roosevelt conferred with Senator George, of Georgia, ranking Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee, and Assistant Secretary Sullivan on the tax proposals, including raising the normal income rate on individuals, the corporation and excess profits taxes.

George to Handle Bill

George is now slated to handle the tax bill in the Senate, since Chairman Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, is ill at Hot Springs, Ark., and is not expected to return to Washington for some weeks.

Proposals being considered, according to George, are the raising of the normal income tax rate from 4 to 8 per cent, and the boosting of corporation taxes from 24 to 30 per cent, plus hikes in inheritance, gift and excess profits levies.

Play Ball!

President Roosevelt will start the major league baseball season with a 3 o'clock pitch at Griffith Stadium. Thirty-three thousand fans will watch the President send into action the Nats and the New York Yankees.

At 2:45 p. m., Vice President Wallace and Clark Griffith will lead the parade to center field for flag-raising ceremonies. Dutch Leonard will be on the mound for the Nats with Marius Russo pitching for New York.

Wage War Humanely, Pope Pleads

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, April 13.—Pope Pius XII besought the belligerent nations in an Easter Sunday message today to refrain from using "still more homicidal instruments of warfare," and urged all Catholics to redouble their prayers for an early, universal and just peace.

He likewise urged upon "the powers occupying territories during the war" that they deal "justly, humanely and providentially" with the peoples under their domination.

"Prudent and helpful humanitarianism is the commendation and boast of wise generals," he observed. "And the treatment of prisoners and civilians in occupied areas is the surest indication and proof of the civilization of individuals and nations.

"But above all, remember that upon the manner in which you deal with those whom the fortunes of war put in your hands depend the blessing or curse of God upon your own fatherland."

The pontiff spoke for 20 minutes from his private library after canceling his customary Easter Sunday appearance on St. Peter's Loggia for delivery of the Easter blessing. The Benediction, like the message, was broadcast over the Vatican City radio. Afterward

Officials Here, Ill-Pleased, Wait Detailed Study Of the Treaty

By William V. Nessly

Washington, with ill-concealed distaste, last night studied provisions of the new Soviet-Japanese nonaggression pact, amid numerous conflicting interpretations of its objectives and effects and the forces that brought it into being.

State Department officials maintained complete silence on the new agreement, pointing out that they had had little opportunity to study its provisions and no official word of its conclusion. They indicated that no comment would be forthcoming pending detailed study of the clauses and their significance and potentialities.

Among others in the capital there was disagreement over whether Russia had suffered a diplomatic defeat or had managed to free herself from any danger of attack by Japan in case she finds herself in conflict with Germany.

Likewise, the extent to which Japan would feel herself freer, with her northern "backdoor" safeguarded, to renew her drive of conquest southward provided an argument in well-informed circles.

That Moscow had entered into the agreement under Axis pressure was a view held by many, though others saw a possibility that the pact was in harmony with recent evidences of stiffening Soviet policy against continued German encroachments in the Balkans.

Among many there was a plain feeling that Japan might consider herself freer to continue her expansion southward, despite this country's consistent efforts to discourage such a policy. Release of more Japanese soldiers for any land movement to the south was pictured in these circles as the most important immediate effect of the accord.

Russia and Europe

On the other hand, it was said in some diplomatic quarters that while such a result may have been Japan's chief reason for negotiating the treaty, Russia undoubtedly had her own reason for signing.

Belief that the Soviet officials had their eyes on Europe more than on Asia as presenting the Soviet's most pressing problem, is in line with official expression here to the effect that Russia is giving greater thought to the menace which spreading Nazi force offers to her own interests.

On March 25, Undersecretary of State Welles expressed this country's satisfaction at Russia's March 24 pledge of benevolent and helpful neutrality to Turkey in case the Turks are attacked by Germany.

Pact Held Blow To Democracies

Shanghai (Monday) April 14 (AP).—The likelihood of the European war spilling over into the Pacific has been increased considerably by the Japanese-Russian neutrality pact, informed foreign observers here said today.

These informants, viewing the pact as a serious setback to the democracies, declared it removed one of the three barriers heretofore preventing a Japanese move against the British and the Netherlands East Indies in the south Pacific, and possibly the United States' Far Eastern possessions.

The remaining two barriers, they pointed out, were the presence of the United States fleet in the Pacific and the war in China, which is tying up a million Japanese soldiers.

Accord Frees Tokyo's Hands In East, Soviet's In Europe

By the Associated Press

Moscow, April 13.—Russia and Japan, long-time dueling powers of the Far East, joined in a neutrality pact today that may be as protentous as the nonaggression accord between Berlin and Moscow in 1939, which preceded the German invasion of Poland.

In a four-point pact, each agreed to remain neutral throughout any period during which either of the signatories is the "object of military action on the part of one or several powers."

Each undertakes to respect the "territorial inviolability" of the other.

The pact, so it says, "guarantees peaceful and friendly relations" between the two powers.

The astounding character of the pact was emphasized in an accompanying joint declaration pledging the Soviet to respect the territorial integrity of Japan's puppet state, Manchukuo, something to which the Soviet never before agreed.

Parallel Pledge by Japan

Almost as revolutionary was Japan's parallel pledge to respect the status of the Moscow-dominated Outer Mongolian People's Republic.

(The world-shaking significance of this new reaching of hands from Rome to Berlin to Tokyo to Moscow was indicated by a dispatch of Domei, Japanese news agency, received in Shanghai. Domei said the agreement "guarantees the security of Japan's northern backdoor in the event she is involved in a Pacific war."

(Observers pointed out it removes a check on Japanese ambitions to move southward in the Pacific toward the Philippines, Indo-China, the Dutch East Indies and Singapore, and might be a deterrent to the United States in moving its fleet out of the Pacific to engage in convoy duty in the Atlantic.

(On the other hand, the pact also laid the Japanese bugaboo in the East should Stalin have any intention of making a stiffer stand against the Nazis in the Balkans. It also gave him assurances of peace in the East should the Germans really launch a drive at the Ukrainian wheat and oil lands, a danger of which British Prime Minister Churchill recently warned.

Germans Hail News

(German spokesmen received the news with the "deepest satisfaction" and said it would have a sobering influence on the United States.

(The fate of China and the aid she has been receiving from Russia was believed in the balance.)

The pact is effective for five years and is renewable for an additional five-year term unless one side denounces it a year before expiration of the first period.

It is to be ratified as quickly as possible and the formal exchange of ratification documents is to take

British Torpedo-Boat Foray Wrecks Norse Harbor Works

By the United Press

Stockholm, (Monday), April 14.—British forces have again landed in northern Norway and destroyed harbor works and German military objectives in a daring sea raid, dispatches from Oslo reported early today.

A British torpedo boat was said to have attacked an unidentified harbor of northern Norway Saturday, after which troops were landed and harbor works destroyed.

Norwegian anti-Nazi volunteers aided in the attack, the Oslo reports said.

An official German communique was quoted as saying that the wife of a local leader of the Nasjonal Samling (the Quislingist Norwegian Nazi Party) was killed by machine-gun fire during the British attack.

[Apparently, this raid was carried out along the same lines as the British sortie early in March against the Lofoten Islands, off Narvik, when large supplies of Nazi oil and fish oil refineries were blown up and a large number of Norwegians anxious to fight against the Germans taken back to England.

[Ten German vessels and one Norwegian ship under German control were sunk, according to the British admiralty, in the Lofoten raid March 4.

[In that foray, British and Norwegian troops captured 215 Germans and ten Quisling Norwegians and took more than 300 Norwegian patriots back to Britain. The attackers, not losing a man, received little opposition from the German forces.]

4,000 to Open D.A.R. Parley Today; Memorial Rites Held

Daughters of the American Revolution, on the eve of the opening of their fiftieth Continental Congress at which problems of national defense will be paramount, yesterday paused to hold a memorial service for 2,485 members who have died in the past year and to dedicate a tree to the two surviving daughters of Revolutionary soldiers.

Four thousand delegates and alternates are expected to arrive for the formal opening session at 8:30 tonight which will be historic for at least one reason. An Englishman, Nevile Butler, minister from Great Britain, will make the keynote address on "The Price of Liberty," in Constitution Hall.

The National Defense Symposium at 2 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel will bring an address on "Building Our Army" by Representative J. Buell Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House subcommittee on military appropriations.

With Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, the only candidate to announce for the office of president general, and with her slate due to be elected with her, the only election contest to develop so far is among six candidates for four positions as vice presidents general at large.

The are Mrs. William Wesley Brothers, of Pocatello, Idaho; Mrs. James F. Donahue, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. Thomas Clair Maguire, of Plant City, Fla.; Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. Elly Ruff Barnes, of Montgomery, Ala., and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, of Washington, D. C. Nominations for officers will be made at Wednesday night's session.

Several hundred advance arrivals for the convention gathered in Memorial Continental Hall yesterday for the service in memory of deceased members.

Afterward a small elm—a fourth generation descendant of the famous Washington Elm in Cambridge, Mass., where Gen. Washington took command of the American Army—was dedicated on the grounds. Mingled in the earth at its roots was soil from eight locali-

Dallas Columnist's Wife Held In Slaying of Night Club Dancer

By International News Service

Dallas, Tex., April 13.—Mrs. Juanita Barr, wife of Eddie Barr, night club columnist for a Dallas newspaper, was released on $25,000 bond tonight after being charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Blanche Woodall, 27-year-old night club dancer.

Two deputy sheriffs arrested Mrs. Barr at a Dallas County tourist camp Sunday morning, a few hours after she had handed a pistol to her husband at an all-night restaurant. At the time, Barr told officers, she said:

"I just killed Blanche."

Barr supposed his wife was joking. She got in an automobile and drove away and was not located until 8:30 a. m.

Mrs. Woodall, estranged wife of Bennie Woodall, well-known fight promoter of Dallas and New York City, was the mother of two children, who were asleep in an adjoining bedroom at her apartment when she was shot. Her brother also was sleeping at the apartment. He told investigators the two women had been arguing when he went to bed.

Shortly after 11 p. m. Saturday a Negro maid entered the living room and found Mrs. Woodall dead, shot once through the head. The maid told authorities she saw Mrs. Barr leaving the apartment a moment after two shots were fired.

Mrs. Woodall is also survived by a sister, wife of the nationally-known Dallas fight promoter and former lightweight fighter, Dickie Grimm.

Soviet, Japan Sign Treaty Of Neutrality

Yosuke Matsuoka, and the Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, at the Kremlin at 2:30 p. m.

It was announced on the Moscow radio at 5 p. m., and Matsuoka who had spent nearly a week in Moscow in secret negotiations, took the Transsiberian express for Tokyo place in Tokyo.

The document was signed by Japan's touring foreign minister, fifty-five minutes later.

Joseph Stalin personally saw him off at the train, a high compliment to Matsuoka.

Matsuoka, for whom the pact was a signal triumph, arrived here March 23 for a one-day stay on his journey for Axis conferences in Berlin and Rome, where he saw Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

He saw Molotoff then in the presence of Stalin.

Returning from Berlin and Rome last Monday, he saw Molotoff four more times, including one conference of three and a half hours, and another conference yesterday in which Stalin again engaged.

(While Russia's relations with her pushing Far Eastern neighbor apparently were clarified by the pact, the Soviet's attitude toward events in Europe, and particularly the Balkans, was far from clear.)

German Ambassador Count Friedrich Werner von der Schulenburg and Slovak Minister Franz Tiso left tonight for consultations with their governments in Berlin and Bratislava.

Slovakia is a part of the German-protected Czecho-Slovakia, of which Hungary also got a slice in Carpatho-Ukraine.

While Russia was putting the seals to her nonaggression pact in the East, the official press gave prominent display to a foreign office communique reproving Hungary for invading a Slav nation, Yugoslavia.

"Considered especially significant" was the foreign office's reference to Hungary's own national minorities and the danger to Hungary should she become involved in trouble.

(Carpatho-Ukraine is largely inhabited by a people kindred to Russia's Ukrainians.)

The rebuke to Hungary was similar but more outspoken than the one administered Bulgaria six weeks ago for permitting German troops to enter the country.

The papers also gave an extensive account of a broadcast by the Yugoslav premier, Gen. Dusan Simovic, in which he was reported to have stressed the "friendship between Yugoslavia and the U. S. S. R."

These expresisons of the attitude of the Soviet toward events in the Balkans, all of which, it has been emphasized, are in the interest of peace, recently have been reinforced by two other actions: Reaffirmation of an accord of friendship and nonaggression with Turkey and—on the eve of the German invasion—completion of a treaty of friendship and nonaggression with Yugoslavia.

Victory for Peace, Says Konoye

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Monday) April 14.—Japan and Russia finally came to terms in a five-year neutrality pact which Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye today described as "epoch-making" and as a contribution to "promotion of world peace."

The surprise agreement, which altered entirely the Far Eastern picture, was announced simultaneously here and in Moscow.

Konoye declared the new agreement was entered upon to realize the purpose of the three-power pact with Germany and Italy—namely to "prevent the world-wide spread of war and to secure the peace of Greater East Asia."

With her fears of attack in the north eliminated, Japan now can look forward to her program in the south with greater ease and confidence, although the conflict in China still presents a problem to her ambitions.

The Japanese press has constantly played upon the theme that some solution will soon be forthcoming in China, where Japanese forces have been engaged for almost four years.

In burying the hatchet with Moscow, Japan followed clearly in the footsteps of her Axis partner, Germany, which also has a nonaggression agreement with the Soviet Union.

Japan's close alliance with the two European powers was emphasized by article five of the three-power pact, which declared "Japan, Germany and Italy affirm that the aforesaid terms do not in any way affect the political status which exists at present between each of these three contracting parties."

Churchill Tells Yugoslavia U. S. Stands Behind Her

London, April 13 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill tonight broadcast a message to the Yugoslavs that the "British Empire is fighting with you and behind us is the great democracy of the United States with its vast and ever-increasing resources."

He told the Yugoslavs they had been attacked by a "ruthless barbarous aggressor," adding:

"Your capital has been bombed, your women and children brutally murdered.

"Our cities in England, too, have been bombed by the same insensate foe. Our women and children have been murdered.

"Our sympathy for you, therefore, is heartfelt, for we are sharing the same suffering."

The prime minister said the Yugoslavs are making heroic resistance against formidable odds and thus "proving true to your great traditions."

Text of Russo-Japanese Treaty

Moscow, April 13 (AP).—The texts of the Soviet-Japanese pact and frontier declaration as announced today by Tass, official Soviet news agency:

A neutrality pact between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Japan.

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U. S. S. R. and His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, guided by a desire to strengthen peaceful and friendly relations between the two countries, decided to conclude a pact on neutrality, for the purpose of which they appointed as their representatives:

For the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U. S. S. R., Vyacheslaff Molotoff, chairman of the Council of People's Commissars and People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs.

For his Majesty the Emperor of Japan, Yosuke Matsuoka, Minister of Foreign Affairs, Jusanmin, Cavalier of the Order of the Sacred Treasure, first class; and Yoshitsugu Tatekawa, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary in the U. S. S. R., Lieut. Gen. Jusanmin, Cavalier of the Order of the Rising Sun, First Class, and the Order of the Golden Kite, Fourth Class—who, after the exchange of their credentials, which were found in due and proper form, agreed on the following:

Respect Territorial Integrity

Article 1. Both contracting parties undertake to maintain peaceful and friendly relations between them and mutually respect the territorial integrity and inviolability of the other contracting party.

Article 2. Should one of the contracting parties become the object of hostilities on the part of one or several third powers, the other contracting party will observe neutrality throughout the duration of the conflict.

Article 3. The present pact comes into force from the day of its ratification by both contracting parties and remains valid for five years. In case neither of the contracting parties denounces the pact one year before expiration of the term, it will be considered automatically prolonged for the next five years.

To Be Ratified Soon

Article 4. The present pact is subject to ratification as soon as possible. Instruments of ratification shall be exchanged in Tokyo also as soon as possible.

In confirmation whereof the above-named representatives signed the present pact in two copies, drawn up in the Russian and Japanese languages, and affixed thereto their seals.

Done in Moscow April 13, 1941, which corresponds to the 13th day of the fourth month of the 16th year of Showa.

Signed by Molotoff, Yosuke Matsuoka, Yoshitsugu Tatekawa.

Declaration:

In conformity with the spirit of the neutrality pact concluded April 13, 1941, between the U. S. S. R. and Japan, the governments of the U. S. S. R. and Japan in the interests of insuring peaceful and friendly relations between the two countries, solemnly declare that the U. S. S. R. pledges to respect the territorial integrity and inviolability of Manchoukuo, and Japan pledges to respect the territorial integrity and inviolability of the Mongolian People's Republic.

Moscow, April 13, 1941, signed on behalf of the Government of the U. S. S. R. by Molotoff; on behalf of the Government of Japan by Yosuke Matsuoka and Yoshotsugu Tatekawa.

Pope Asks Mercy In Warfare

priests read translations of the message in French, English, Spanish, Portuguese, German, Polish, Dutch and Hungarian.

He characterized the war as a "ruthless struggle" which at times "can be described only as atrocious" as he urged all belligerents to "show some feeling of charity for the sufferings of civilian populations, for defenseless women and children, for the sick and aged, all of whom are often exposed to greater and more widespread perils of war than those faced by soldiers at the fronts."

The introduction of more deadly weapons, he said, "inevitably results in their retaliatory use, often with greater violence by the enemy."

"If already we must lament the fact that the limits of legitimate warfare have been repeatedly exceeded, would not the more widespread use of increasingly barbarous offensive weapons soon transform war into unspeakable horror?" he asked.

His call for prayers for peace said it should be a peace not based "upon the oppression and destruction of peoples but peace which, while guaranteeing the honor of all nations, will satisfy their vital needs and insure the legitimate rights of all."

U. S. Reaction Awaits Details Of New Pact

Only last Monday, Secretary Hull indicated his belief that Soviet policy was shifting as a result of continued German advances against her neighbors. The Secretary said the April 5 pact of friendship and nonaggression granted by Russia to Yugoslavia, then menaced by German threats, makes it clearer that virtually all nations have become acutely aware of the nature of the movement of conquest which he said was intended to dominate peoples everywhere by military force.

Pledges Might Conflict

In this connection keen interest was shown in Moscow's quick rebuke on Saturday to Nazi-dominated Hungary for her invasion of Yugoslavia.

The new Moscow-Tokyo understanding, it was felt here, might tend to counteract, so far as Russia is concerned, the obligation assumed by Japan in joining the Berlin-Rome Axis, to fight any power, not then a participant in the European war, who might "attack" the war against Germany and Italy. It appeared to observers here that in case Russia should clash with Germany or Italy, it appeared to observers here that in case Russia should clash with Germany over the latter's undoubted coveting of the Ukraine, Japan might be faced with conflicting international commitments, one to fight with her Axis partners, the other to remain neutral as to Russia. However, the Axis pact provided that its terms "do not in any way affect the political status which exists at present as between each of the three contracting parties and Soviet Russia."

Absence of any provision in yesterday's pact that Russia should discontinue supplying military materiel to China, an important factor in China's dogged resistance to Japanese invasion, was pointed to here as possibly significant.

Protracted efforts by this country to improve Soviet-American relations and wean Moscow away from the Axis appeared at first glance to have suffered a blow, but it was clear that officials here were not disposed to admit defeat in that direction.

At the same time, there was speculation on how the new pact might affect United States exports to Russia, restrictions on which had been lightened somewhat at times on urgent Soviet requests for such supplies as machine tools.

Congressional reaction to word of the pact, as gathered by International News Service, was varied.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, observed that while the treaty "definitely makes Russia stronger in the Balkans and Japan stronger in the Pacific," he did not believe it could be interpreted as "a slap at the United States."

Wheeler Sees Defeat for Hitler

"I never have felt," Wheeler said, "that the Axis partners could aid Japan unless Japan attacked or got into war with Russia. This hazard appears to have been removed. I do not place much significance in the treaty as regards Japan's intentions toward us, because I never have felt that she wants war with us. I consider it a diplomatic defeat for Hitler. He gets nothing out of it at all."

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, agreed with Wheeler. He doubted that the treaty would increase the danger to the United States in the Pacific.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, differed with his non-interventionist colleagues.

"The most significant thing," Nye said, "is that it leaves us in a straitjacket in the light of the aggressive position we have taken in the Pacific. If it means war in the Pacific, Japan now is free to forget that she has a neighbor who might be dangerous."

Officials Not Surprised

Others interpreted the agreement as a logical extension of Russia's "opportunist policy."

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, Senate Foreign Relations Commmittee, said it was "obvious that Japan is anxious to get her hands free to pursue her objectives in Asia."

"Whether the pact will encourage Tokyo to move against Singapore, the Dutch East Indies and elsewhere is problematical," Downey said. "I believe Japan is nearing the breaking point and it is possible Russia may be encouraging Tokyo to overextend itself in order to speed the Japanese collapse."

News of the pact did not come as a surprise to some official sources who had expected some sort of agreement from Matsuoka's visits to Berlin, Rome and Moscow. In this connection, it was pointed out that the fact Stalin went to the unusual lengths of participating in some of the Russian talks with Matsuoka was a possible tip-off that an accord was imminent.

Panzer Units Clank Into Belgrade

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 13.—German panzer units rolled into Belgrade, Yugoslavia's abandoned and battered capital, shortly after dawn today, the Nazi high command announced, just a week to the day after launching its twin campaign against that Balkan country and Greece.

The triumphant entry, at 6:30 a. m. was reported to the German people in a communique which listed other important Axis victories in North Africa and the Battle of the Atlantic.

Nazi mechanized units pounding up the Serbian plain from the south moved into Belgrade, the high command reported, after small groups of storm troopers had crossed the Danube from the north late yesterday and entered the city to hoist the swastika over the German Legation.

The Yugoslav capital, heavily assaulted by the Luftwaffe and long since abandoned by its government, had been the objective of German forces driving in from the Bulgarian border, some 40 miles to the east, from the north and from the south.

The high command, still silent on land operations against Greece, announced further that at Nazi-occupied Zagreb, capital of Croatia in northwest Yugoslavia, 22 generals, including two army commanders, 200 other officers and 12,000 men had been seized.

German units in the Zagreb area "continue their movement on schedule," it added, and reported Italian occupation of Ljubljana, capital of Slovenia.

"In South Serbia," the communique continued, "the march forward continued as planned, after overcoming localized opposition by remnants of dispersed Serb troops."

Other Axis successes—occupation of Bardia, Libyan port 10 miles from the Egyptian border in North Africa, and the sinking of 15 British ships totalling 75,922 tons in the Atlantic—were reported in special communiques.

German U-boats ranging in the north and middle Atlantic and west of Africa were reported "in recent days" to have bagged three British merchantmen, all described as "armed." In addition, German planes were reported to have sunk an "enemy" merchant ship of 4,000 tons in the Greek port of Salamis, scored direct hits on four other big ships there and to have sunk an auxiliary cruiser at Tobruk.

The air force, cooperating further with the sea raiders, was reported to have pounded two tank concentrations, a power plant and a mill at Piraeus, Port of Athens.

Meanwhile, other air units blasted away at airports, troop and freight trains in Yugoslavia. A total of 39 planes were destroyed, the high command claimed, in raids on airdromes in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

An "unestimated mass" of booty was declared captured in the Zagreb area, including 100 cannon, ten planes, munitions and gasoline.

Auxiliary Cruiser Sunk At Tobruk, Nazis Say

Rome, April 13.—German and Italian forces slashing across North Africa toward the Suez Canal have recaptured Bardia, last British-held stronghold in Libya, after trapping imperial forces at Tobruk, 80 miles to the west, the Fascist high command announced today.

News of the capture of this Mediterranean port, about 10 miles from the Egyptian frontier, was given the Italian people in an Easter Sunday communique which also told of deeper penetration into Yugoslavia and new contact with the Germans on the Balkan front.

The German radio, reporting a continuing Axis rush toward Egypt, declared the surrender of "a considerable British force" at encircled Tobruk was "inevitable."

The German high command said a British auxiliary cruiser had been sunk by Nazi stukas in Tobruk harbor.

6 French Officers Die in Plane Crash

Algiers, April 13 (AP).—Commandant Henri Petijean-Roget, air liaison officer on Gen. Maxime Weygand's general staff in North Africa, and five other officers, were killed Thursday when a military transport crashed on the takeoff.

and our soldiers are eager to fight.

"The prospects are excellent. Greek soldiers with bayonets are superior to the Germans and the German superiority is merely mechanical.

"Our defenses are strengthening more every day.

"On the Albanian front, where we hold the Italians terror-stricken action of any importance.

"The war is entering its second phase because the Yugoslav main forces are being reconstituted in central Yugoslavia."

With the Yugoslav forces reorganized, the Greek radio said, the Germans will find themselves faced with even greater troubles in the narrow waistline of Yugoslavia between Bulgaria and Albania, hampering any direct assault southward on the Greek-British line.

Heavy battling between Yugoslav and German forces was reported around Nis and northwest of Nis toward Belgrade the Germans have been cut off and isolated in two sectors, the Athens radio said.

Authoritative advices said that British troops had "contacted" the enemy near the eastern anchorage of the Greek front and, in an all-day engagement, had driven back the Germans.

The battle was said to have been waged somewhere north of Mount Olympus, in the region of Yanitsa, about 28 miles from Salonika.

The Serbian guerrilla warriors, slashing at German lines and positions across the 110-mile-wide waistline of Yugoslavia, were said to be sweeping down from the mountains in small forces and disrupting the German efforts to string a solid steel barrier across Yugoslavia.

In the region of German-captured Nis, the Yugoslavs were said authoritatively to be attacking fiercely on both sides of the Morava River, impeding the German "mop-up" push upon Belgrade from the Bulgarian frontier to the southeast.

An entire German armored force was said to have been isolated at the mercy of the Yugoslav troops in the Topola region.

The Yugoslav Serbian troops, it was added, are stubbornly holding the Kragujevac-Krusevac region along the Morava and Ibar Rivers just north of Nis.

The town of Brokuplje, it was stated, has been recaptured by the Yugoslavs, and, farther south, German Panzer forces trying to drive a wedge across Serbia have been driven back to Suha Reka.

Yugoslav forces were reported pushing steadily southeastward through Kachanik Pass of the Kosovo Mountains south of Pristina, in an effort to recapture the key Vardar Valley city of Skoplje from the Germans.

The Greek minister of public security told of heavy German bombing attacks on Greek ports, towns and islands in the Ionian and Aegean Seas, apparently aimed at cutting off reinforcements of British troops and supplies.

German planes in three waves bombed the Port of Volos, 30 miles southeast of Larissa on the Gulf of Volos below the eastern end of the British-Greek line around Mount Olympus, the Greek radio said.

Three of the enemy planes were shot down by antiaircraft fire and fell into the sea in flames, it was said.

A German plane was said to have machine-gunned a small Greek motorship near Samothrace Island in the Aegean near the Turkish coast, directly east of Athens, where German planes flew over "in successive waves" Saturday night and dropped bombs around the port of Piraeus.

evident Axis push aimed at Alexandria and the Suez Canal, Cairo quarters said the military situation was "considerably better" than a week ago due to arrival of British imperial reinforcements.

Additional British troops, coming up from East Africa where the defeat of Italy virtually has been completed, are becoming available for action in the Libyan-Egyptian frontier area every day, it was stated.

U.S., Britain Act To Standardize Air Equipment

London, April 13 (AP).—British and United States officials have worked out details for the standardization of aircraft equipment in both countries, Maj. Henry H. Arnold, United tates air chief, said today in a press conference.

The standardization of equipment was made "so that when our airplanes come over they will be equally acceptable as the British," he said. "The two countries are not hiding anything from each other in the matter of aircraft equipment."

Hindsight and Foresight—

With This Help He Kept His Insurance

Here is a story, sent to me by an agent in a Hudson River Valley city, which shows what can be done to help people in difficulty to keep their life insurance.

This agent tells how a Mr. Franklin came to him two years ago to arrange for a loan on his policy. Mr. Franklin had paid his premiums on the dot for twelve years, but lately he'd been having trouble.

It was the usual story—daughter's teeth being straightened, wife in hospital, bills piling up. The agent knew, of course, that a loan is often the first step in losing a policy—but he knew, too, that in just such emergencies as this, life insurance could render a great service and still be saved.

A year passed, Mrs. Franklin left the hospital, and the agent persuaded her husband to begin small payments on the loan. Then, suddenly, his father died, his mother came to live with them—and on top of that, he had a salary cut.

But he didn't drop his policy. He went over his financial setup with the agent, together they worked out a way of maintaining small regular payments on the loan, and he kept the insurance which had already helped him through one time of emergency.

The proportion of people who keep up their life insurance is higher today than ever before. This cheering improvement is partly due to better times. It is also due in large part to the better and better job of conservation on the part of agents—in helping their clients break the chain of circumstances which leads to the termination of a policy.

Net earned income	$ 5,549,497	$D 1,622,207	$ 7,171,704

(D) Denotes deficit or decrease.

This statement shows the interest as accrued and charged but the resultant cash is allocated and payable in accordance with the Company's Plan for Modification of Interest Charges and Maturities and the available net income as ascertained and determined by the President and Directors is $16,806,097 from which there is first deductible, in the discretion of the President and Directors, an amount not to exceed 3½% of total operating revenues for capital fund to be applied to or to reimburse the Company's treasury for capital expenditures, and to this purpose there was appropriated $3,965,265, leaving $12,909,832 to be applied to the payment of contingent interest payable May 1, 1941, in accordance with the priorities of the respective mortgages. This payment will be made against surrender of secured contingent interest coupons due May 1, 1941, from The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Refunding and General Mortgage Bonds, Series A, C, D and F; Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railway Company Consolidated Mortgage Bonds, and Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Western Railroad Company First Mortgage Bonds. With this application of available net income there remains unpaid secured contingent interest of $1,361,361, consequently no unsecured contingent interest will be payable May 1, 1941, on the Company's First Mortgage 5% Bonds, Southwestern Division Bonds and Thirty-Year Convertible Bonds. All unsecured unpaid interest accumulates as an absolute obligation and is payable pro rata out of future earnings.

In anticipation of increased traffic and its expeditious handling in the cause of National Defense the Company contracted for new equipment of the total value of $14,896,117 including 1,500 steel box cars, 1,500 steel gondola cars and 1,100 steel hopper cars; and in addition 3 multiple and 1 single units of Diesel passenger locomotives and 25 Diesel switching locomotives, and in this connection issued equipment obligations aggregating $12,098,205; and during the same period retired $5,821,000 of outstanding interest bearing obligations, mainly matured instalments of principal of equipment trust obligations making the net increase in interest bearing obligations of $6,277,205.

'Resist Attack,' De Valera Tells Irish Troops

By the United Press

Dublin, April 13.—Prime Minister Eamon De Valera tonight warned the Irish people by radio, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the bloody Easter rebellion, to stand ready to "resist attack" in another defense of their homeland.

De Valera's radio broadcast followed the greatest military parade in the history of independent Eire, with 20,000 soldiers marching in full war kit through the streets alongside veterans of the 1916 rebellion.

The military procession marched through the main streets to the post-office where De Valera, who was imprisoned and sentenced to death for his part in the Easter uprising, received the salute of the troops and 1916 veterans, alongside other government officials.

"Today in a warring world," said De Valera, "the freedom of nations everywhere is imperiled.

De Valera's insistence upon strict Irish neutrality was significant in view of Washington dispatches Saturday reporting that the United States is considering inviting Eire to give Britain naval and air bases in return for lend-lease aid. British Prime Minister Churchill, speaking in Commons last week, again appealed to the Irish to provide Britain with the sorely needed naval and air bases.

"Every day the war continues," said De Valera, "our dangers will increase."

De Valera urged the immediate completion of plans for the evacuation of women and children from Dublin and other large centers in event of war.

President Douglas Hyde of Eire in another broadcast to the Irish people said:

"On Easter week 25 years ago the chains which bound us were broken at last and have gradually fallen off so that today we are a free people.

"We shall never lose that freedom so long as we remain united."

ties associated with Washington. It was collected by Mrs. James H. Dorsey, of Baltimore, at Wakefield, Va., George Washington's birthplace; Ferry Farms, Va., where he spent part of his boyhood; Fort Necessity, Pa., scene of his first military engagement; his mother's home in Fredericksburg, Va.; Independence Hall, Philadelphia; Cambridge, Mass.; the State House at Annapolis, and Mount Vernon, Va.

Mrs. Loren Edgar Rex, chaplain general, led the memorial service, at which Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Annapolis, president general, paid tribute to the contributions made by members in the ranks. As Mrs. Rex called the roll of the States and the number of deaths in each, white-clad pages filled an urn with lilies—which was later placed at the Founders' Memorial Monument, in the garden.

Of the deceased members, 63 lived in the District of Columbia, 23 in Maryland and 39 in Virginia.

Tributes to officers and charter members who died since the last congress were brought by Mrs. James B. Crankshaw, Fort Wayne, Ind., Mrs. William J. Crittenden, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Raymond G. Kimbell, Chicago; Mrs. J. Warren Perkins and Mrs. William B. Hardy.

Memorial music was presented by Helen B. Benham, contralto; Mrs. Herbert F. Krimendahl, harpist, and Gene Stewart, organist.

When the flowers were placed at the monument, Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, charter member No. 133 and only member to attend every D. A. R. Congress, spoke briefly about the founders. She recalled that a letter from one of the founders to The Washington Post in July, 1890, gave the start to the organization of the D. A. R.

Tribute to the two surviving daughters of Revolutionary soldiers, Mrs. Annie Knight Gregory, Williamsport, Pa., 98 years old, and Mrs. Caroline P. Randall, Claremont, N. H., 92 years old, centered around the dedication of the elm tree. Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, chairman of the Real Daughters Committee, reported on the latest news concerning them. Mrs. Robert told the pedigree of the tree—from the seeds which Mrs. Dorsey's uncle gathered under the old Washington Elm in 1888.

Sessions of the Congress will continue through Saturday morning, with national defense to be the theme of the major addresses. Closer cooperation with the American Red Cross in its war relief work will be one of the matters under discussion.

Among leading addresses scheduled this week at sessions in Constitution Hall are: "The Civilian in National Defense," Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator, Thursday night; "Pan America and Hemisphere Defense," Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long, Thursday afternoon; "Can Democracy Be Defended?" H. R. Baukhage, radio commentator, Saturday morning; "Radio in National Defense," H. V. Kaltenborn, commentator, Thursday morning; "Education for Defense," Miss Martha Berry, of Georgia, founder and director, Berry College and the Berry Schools, Wednesday afternoon. "The Red Cross in War Relief," Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary, American Red Cross, Wednesday morning.

Staff Backs Danish Envoy On Greenland

Copyright by New York Times

Danish Minister Henrik De Kauffmann, although officially recalled by the German-controlled Copenhagen government, has the complete support of the staff of the legation, a spokesman here said last night.

All members of the legation and Danish consular officers throughout the United States will back De Kauffmann's agreement with the United States to permit this country to protect Greenland during the dangers of the European war.

Einar Blechinberg, counselor, who was put in charge of the legation by the Danish foreign office in its message to De Kauffmann relieving him of his duties, supports the minister's attitude completely, the spokesman said.

Expects to See Hull Today

De Kauffmann, who is supported by the State Department which will continue to recognize him as the Danish Minister, yesterday attempted to see Secretary of State Hull was unable to reach him. He expects to see Hull today.

The minister said that he has prepared a report to submit to Hull. This report, he said, embodies the statements he has given to the press: That the action of the Danish foreign office was taken under duress from the Nazis and that he has no intention of obeying the orders or of returning to Denmark.

De Kauffman had said:

"I came to this country to represent a free and democratic Denmark, and I will continue to do so. I will not accept any orders emanating directly or indirectly from Germany."

The Danish Minister negotiated the agreement which allows this country to establish military bases in Greenland without the knowledge of the Danish government. He signed the agreement on behalf of King Christian X of Denmark and before taking the step secured the approval of the two royal governors of the island colony.

While both Berlin and Copenhagen have termed the pact illegal and having no basis in international law, both De Kauffmann and the United States recognize in it no deviation from the historic policy of this country under the Monroe Doctrine.

The State Department refuses to recognize any protest from Copenhagen on the ground that King Christian X and his government are under German control, while De Kauffmann is adjudged the free agent of his government, under no control or duress.

Girl Pilgrims Of D.A.R. Form A Club Here

Three girls who made a long pilgrimage from the Far West won a majority of the offices, when the Good Citizenship Pilgrims of the D. A. R. organized a club last night. Bonnie Scott, of Nevada, was elected president at the dinner at the Washington Hotel.

Lucy Hartshorn, of Colorado, was named vice president; Dorothy Drew, of Washington State, corresponding secretary; Martha Nicholson, of North Carolina, recording secretary. A D. A. R. official explained the possible "edge" that the Western grils acquired, by pointing out that their group in its longer travel together to Washington had opportunity to get better acquainted and to have potential candidates on tap.

The girls had an exciting day yesterday, beginning with sightseeing, continuing with Easter service at St. Thomas' Church where they saw the President and including visits at Arlington and Mount Vernon. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., President General of the D. A. R., attended their luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel and spoke to them. Dorothy Drew responded to her message. At Mount Vernon, Marian Powelson, of New Jersey and Jessie Williams, of New Mexico laid the wreath at the Washington tomb, while Mrs. G. E. Harbert, of Illinois, vice chairman of the good citizens' committee, spoke the tribute.

At their dinner last night Mrs. Russell William Magna, honorary President General, presented copies of her book of poems to the girls.

Expert Challenges Lindbergh On Usefulness of Greenland

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 13.—A retired University of Michigan geologist today challenged statements attributed to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh that the climate and topography of Greenland make the island unusuable as a springboard for invasion of North America by a European power.

Prof. William Herbert Hobbs, director of three university scientific expeditions to the island from 1927 to 1929, asserted that "the climate of Greenland is on the whole not unfavorable for flying" and that the island is "well adapted for both naval and air bases."

An adviser to the State, War and Navy Departments on matters relating to Greenland, Hobbs declared that on a "filming" expedition to the island conducted by "one of Hitler's friends," the Germans made a careful study of landing fields and arranged for systematic weather observations "on each of these fields for several years."

"Last October," he continued, "a German vessel with 50 armed 'meteorologists' on board attempted to make a landing on the eastern coast, but fortunately their vessel was captured by the Norwegian patrol ship Fridtjof Nansen."

Swede Calls It Hard Job

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, April 13.—The Swedish pilot and specialist on Greenland, Capt. Albin Ahrenberg, declared today in an interview with the Stockholm Tidningen that he did not believe it possible to establish permanent aviation bases in Greenland, or at any rate that the undertaking would be an extremely difficult one.

Capt. Ahrenberg, who was in Greenland after an unsuccessful attempt to fly across the Atlantic in 1929 and again in 1931 when he flew there to bring help to the stranded British explorer, Rodney Courtauld, said that the weather and flight conditions over Greenland are such that it was impossible to fly there except during two or three months a year, May and June being the best. He believes that the United States only intends to station some seaplane bases in certain fjords around the southern tip of Greenland.

Copenhagen Denies Validity

Copenhagen (via Berlin), April 13 (AP).—The Danish foreign office declared invalid today the agreement for the United States to establish air bases in Greenland because, it asserted, the Danish King and government had not collaborated in the accord.

The foreign office claimed furthermore that King Christian X and his government had not been informed of the agreement signed in Washington by the Danish minister.

It was disclosed that the Danish foreign minister had protested to the American charge d'Affaires here over the question of involving Greenland's sovereignty without giving him a chance to act in behalf of Denmark and over the proposed establishment of American bases there.

Publication of the agreement in this morning's newspapers was the first word of the action made public here. The press carried full terms of the agreement, without comment.

Tourist Tidal Wave Sweeps Capital

pageant for the cherry blossom queen, Miss Nancy Alden Strong.

There, yesterday, the crowd probably was a third larger than on Saturday when the queen was crowned. Possessing the crown only since yesterday and flattered by a larger crowd of spectators after so brief a reign, Miss Strong looked about her kingdom of 3,000 (three thousand!) cherry trees and saw them doing considerably better.

The blossoms are out!

They're mainly what the tourists came here to see, in opinion of operators of the Goodyear Blimp, who, "doing the best day's business ever and having to reject three prospective passengers for every one taken up," couldn't help overhearing tourist talk.

"Will we see the blossoms from the air?" they wanted to know.

One sight seen from above must have been a stark transition in color and movement. When the pageant was completed, the crowds were asked to stand back so the queen and her escorting princesses and their military and naval escorts could pass to the road. In dress uniforms and sweeping colored dresses this group moved slowly from the platform to the step of slow music into the road.

Then, with the throne stand cleared, the tourists charged from the grass pell-mell, first one, then another sitting in the great dark chair Miss Strong had occupied. The transition was from the pageant brightness to the dark gray business suits, the traveling dresses, worn here from the business streets of all the far outlying Americas. The Capital Park Police went up to clear the stand against breakage.

It may be wanted again for next year.

More somberly, the visitors had watched the President enter the church on Eighteenth Street above P to pray. They lined Eighteenth Street from R past Q and a slight cheer, which was more a great sigh of exclamation, arose as the Chief Executive, in formal clothing and hat and seated by Mrs. Roosevelt, parsed and waved his hand.

There was a color note in the women's attire in the crowd about the church and elsewhere—purple and red. It brightened the look of congregations which overflowed every church and compelled many churches to hold two identical services, one at 9 a. m., the other at 11 a. m.

A slight mystery cropped up over where many of the visitors found places to sleep Saturday night. Inquiries at hotels brought, and have brought since last week, the same two words: "Filled up." Only possible answer is that somehow the overflow is finding rooms in private residences. Police said they have seen none resorting to sleep in automobiles.

The situation exists everywhere in this area. Laurel, Md., lodging houses, 20 miles from Washington, reported yesterday they had been filled since Friday night. Alexandria hotels said they had "turned away hundreds" for lack of accommodations.

Problems in Tact

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce worked late Saturday night to help a tourist crisis in its neighboring city. It tried to get rooms for the incoming crowds in Alexandria homes, and with considerable success, it was said.

The local hotels had a problem in tact, too, yesterday. Many of their guests had taken rooms with the understanding they must vacate by Sunday noon to accommodate the incoming Daughters of the American Revolution, 4,000 strong. Some of the installed guests didn't want to get out, it was said.

One large group, enviably, was enabled to stride into the Shoreham Hotel last night—the New York Yankees. They're old, privileged residents at the big outlying hostelry. Maybe the tourists wouldn't have minded such gold-plated privilege, wanting the Yankees to be well and rested. Hopeful of seeing them play today, hundreds of visitors mingled with thousands of Washingtonians in long lines at the Griffith Stadium ticket windows.

Washington homes had little moments. Resting, reading his paper, Joseph Fahy, 3559 Brandywine Street Northwest, was beset by his sons, William, 10, and Bernard, 6, to take them to the blossom pageant at the Tidal Basin.

He didn't start out, so the children did, unbeknownst to their parent. This was at about 11 a. m.

At 4 p. m. they had reached Connecticut Avenue and Porter Street. They went into the Twenty-eighth Fire Engine Company to ask for a drink of water. That's when the parents learned where the children were.

The children didn't see the pageant but their father did. He saw it while down there searching for them.

Tempers were tested in the traffic, which police described as the heaviest in any Easter here, and on the highways in all directions. There were small flare-ups, as at Thirteenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, when a motorist with Florida license tags on his car waited until the green light faded into red and then proceeded, through the stop, on his way. Drivers of cars behind him screamed.

The Park Police said that they counted 30,000 automobiles passing over the Inlet Bridge at the Tidal Basin, between 7 a. m. and 4 p. m. yesterday, "twice as many as last year." The crowds these and other cars unloosed did not bunch up in downtown Washington but spread, in search of interesting sights, to all parts of the city.

Arlington Mansion custodians reported that up to 6 p. m. 4,695 visitors had been there. More than 200,000 persons, probably a record, the guards said, visited the Capitol building yesterday, so many the revolving doors could not accommodate the rush, and had to be shoved back. With 12,500 paid admissions at Mount Vernon, that shrine had the second largest crowd in its history. The record came in cherry blossom time, April 18, 1937. Soldiers and children went in free yesterday.

An additional 5,000 persons milled about the outside gates. One woman fainted.

Watchful for a glimpse of the President, 5,000 persons jammed about the southwest gates of the White House when the Chief Executive returned from church. Inside the grounds an all-time record was being set, with a clocked number of 13,565. Overseeing them were 50 White House police and Secret Service operatives, commanded by White House Secret Service Chief Col. E. W. Starling and Police Capt. H. L. Marcey. Nothing marred the day there. Unaccountably, not one child was lost.

Hull Condemns Disregard Of Treaties

Secretary of State Hull, denouncing the "brutal disregard of international morality" in some actions of the world, last night urgently called upon the 21 American republics to "rededicate their energies" to the defense of their common frontiers and the preservation of their endangered freedom.

In a formal message, the Secretary proclaimed as still the keystone of inter-American relations the "sanctity of the pledged word" by which they have bound themselves together in defense against the hazards of daily widening European aggression.

He addressed himself to the republics of the new world on the eve of their joint observance today of Pan American Day, as every capital scheduled a hemispheric celebration of the anniversary.

His words achieved timely importance, by being interjected in the midst of a challenge by Germany to this Government's extension of its Monroe Doctrine to embrace the Danish colony of Greenland, a German-coveted base for the "battle of the Atlantic."

Anniversary of Union

Noting the anniversary of the Pan American Union, Hull said:

"These celebrations bring each year a renewed consciousness and appreciation of the high concept of international relations developed in the Americas under the aegis of this great international organization.

"In these days of brutal disregard of international morality in some sections of the world, Pan American Day acquires a new significance and affords the people of the Americas an opportunity to reaffirm their unswerving devotion to those ideals of mutual respect and sanctity of the pledged word which constitute the keystone of inter-American relations.

"On this memorable anniversary, may the people of the United States join with their brothers in the other American republics in rededicating their thoughts and energies to the defense and preservation of those high principles of freedom, justice, and order under law, upon which the independent nations of the New World were founded."

Nelson A. Rockefeller, coordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the American republics, meanwhile, announced the appointment of Don Francisco, on leave of absence as president of Lord & Thomas Advertising Agency, as director of the communications division of the coordinator's office. He succeeds James W. Young, who will retire to private enterprise.

Wallace Gives Luncheon for Gen. Camacho

By the Associated Press

Gen. Maximino Avila Camacho, unofficial goodwill ambassador from Mexico, continued his contacts with leaders of this Government yesterday at a luncheon given by Vice President Wallace.

Following the luncheon, aides to the Mexican general said he had expressed himself as "greatly pleased and grateful" for the cordial reception given him by Wallace. The latter, it was recalled, was a special United States emissary to the inauguration of the Mexican President, Avila Camacho, brother of the visiting general.

Mrs. Avila Camacho, wife of the general, carried on a bit of good neighbor contact herself in the afternoon. Accompanied by Mrs. Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, and Mrs. Quintanilla, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy, she had an interview with Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Avila Camacho presented Mrs. Roosevelt with a typical Mexican costume and a necklace made in Mexico. The Mexican ladies said they were delighted with the cordiality shown them by the First Lady of the United States.

Following his luncheon with Wallace, Gen. Avila Camacho and Ambassador Castillo Najera motored around Washington last night. The general dined quietly with his intimates. Today he will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery and possibly inspect the headquarters troop at Fort Myer, Va. The general expects to leave for a tour of other American cities, not yet designated in order, today or tomorrow.

Those who attended Wallace's luncheon, in addition to Mrs. Wallace and the general and his wife, were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora Francisco Castillo Najera, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, the military attache of the Mexican Embassy, Col. Cristobal Guzman Cardenas, and Senora de Guzman Cardenas, Francisco Ortiz Monastorio, chief of the section of American political affairs of the department of foreign relations of the Mexican government, and Maj. Wendell G. Johnson, U. S. A., military aid to Gen. Avila Camacho.

Thousands Join in Easter Rites

particular by the Grand Encampment of the United States.

Standing on the rostrum before hundreds of the plumed Knights and others, Bishop Adna Wright Leonard spoke of Christ's life that "triumphed over hunger and thirst, darkness and barrenness, and over its greatest enemy—death."

"He is emphasizing not only immortality, but life as a present as well as a future good," he said, and added that the crux of the Easter message is "the everlasting and perpetual presence of the crucified but risen and living Christ."

"Loyalty to Him," he stated, "has compelled men to uttermost sacrifice and has educated the heart in the courtesies born of humility. This man and his gospel have put the mirth of God into gloomy spirits, overcome the despairing philosophy of pessimism and supported the soul against enfeebling doubt. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Bishop Leonard is resident prelate of the Washington area, Methodist Church.

Wallace Lays Wreath

Following the services, Vice President Wallace placed a 5-foot cross of lilies at the Unknown Soldier's Tomb on behalf of the Knights Templar of the United States.

As the services opened, Dr. Ze Barney Phillips led the worshipers in intoning the Lord's Prayer, and then asked Divine guidance for "the President of the United States and all others in authority." He is Senate chaplain and grand prelate of the District Grand Commandery.

The grand master of Knights Templar in the United States, Sir Knight Harry J. Pollard, brought greetings, and Dr. James Shera Montgomery, House chaplain and grand prelate emeritus of the District Commandery, read the Apostles Creed. Sir Knight Eugene Thompson presided and Dr. John C. Palmer, chaplain of the District Grand Lodge, read the lesson.

Preaching before 6,000 people yesterday at the Washington Cathedral, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, proclaimed the triumph of life over death as the only hope of men in a darkening world. He spoke at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Holy Communion, celebrated at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m., drew an additional 1,000 pilgrims. More than 5,000 visited the Bishop's Garden during the day. The high altar in the Cathedral sanctuary was used for the first time.

In his morning address, the prelate called Easter "the greatest day in the history of the human race," and referred to its promise of life eternal in the vision of a Risen Christ. All Easter offerings were dedicated to the world-wide missionary work of the Anglican Ccurch.

Easter was an unusually happy day for the Right Rev. Msgr. Eugene Connelly, rector of St. Peter's Catholic Church.

His historic church at Second and C Streets Southeast, badly damaged by fire a year ago, was reopened with ceremonies of solemn high mass. The day also marked the new organ's initial use, with Christopher S. Tenley at the console. He is a member of the American Guild of Organists.

Services at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, drew throngs of the devout. There the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and university rector, pontificated at solemn high mass.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden yesterday welcomed the 1000th member joining the First Baptist Church since he became pastor four years ago. In his morning sermons, Dr. Pruden said the Resurrection was an assurance to mankind that the Risen Christ is a companion in one's sorrows, doubts, failures, disappointments and efforts to serve.

Father Reilly Speaks

"Tombs and deaths are being multiplied in Europe today," the Rev. John J. Reilly said yesterday at Catholic University, "but Easter's message to all of us is that death was conquered and it was Christ who did the conquering."

Preaching at the solemn pontifical mass in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, of which he is director, Father Reilly declared:

"If all the nations in the world had suddenly laid down their arms this would be no more welcome news than the brief announcement of the first Easter morn that the tomb of Christ was a vacant place." The Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and university rector, pontificated.

Furloughs Halted At Ft. McClellan

Fort McClellan, Ala., April 13 (AP). Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell, commandant at Fort McClellan, said today he had received orders from the War Department to cancel all furloughs and leaves at the fort until summer maneuvers are completed.

The order will affect all of the approximately 20,000 men stationed at the post. The general said no explanation was advanced by the War Department.

Winchester Student Wins Elks Essay Prize

Winchester, Va., April 13.—Rhodes Huntsberry, jr., a student at Handley High School, has been declared winner of a patriotic essay contest conducted by the local Elks' Club and will represent this region in a State contest to be held at Richmond.

Other winners were Charlotte Nelson Meade and Janet Lovett, both of Winchester. Cash awards and certificates will be presented to the winners, Thornton Bryanly, exalted ruler of the lodge, announced.

Record Crowd Sees Display At Botanic Garden

The greatest one-day crowd in its history descended yesterday upon the United States Botanic Garden to admire its rare Erebu and Creole lilies, cinerarias, calceolarias, narcissus and other special showings.

When the doors were closed at 5 p. m., after an eight-hour "open house," approximately 32,000 persons had been received. This figure broke the record of 26,000, which was set only three weeks ago, when azaleas were the chief attraction.

Many of yesterday's visitors were florists, botanists and horticulturists, some of whom came long distances to view the thousands of blooms on exhibition.

W. A. Frederick, in charge of the garden, said it had been planned originally to close the doors at 4 p. m., "but they were still coming at the time and we couldn't turn people away."

R. A. F. Again Rains Bombs At Sea Raiders

By the Associated Press

London, April 13.—Still seeking to knock out the German raider warships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, British fliers bombed Brest today, but reported the results of the raid were difficult to observe."

Besides Brest, the British bomber command was reported to have attacked Lorient in a continuance of Easter weekend forays against Germany and German-occupied territories from the North Sea almost to the Spanish border.

On the defensive, British fighters reported they shot down a German bomber off the Cornish coast this afternoon.

The British said they lost two planes in the bombing operations.

Large fires were reported along the Lorient docks and at the port's submarine base. The naval ordnance works were said to be "burning fiercely."

Shipping off the Dutch coast and a number of industrial targets in Holland also were bombed.

Targets north of the Ruhr in Germany were reported bombed and R. A. F. fighters carried out offensive patrols along the coast, machine-gunning the airdrome at Le Touquet and gun positions at Berck.

Last night the town of Merignac, described as the principal base for Germany's Focke Wulf bombers, was raided. Large fires were said to have been started there.

8 State Units To Entertain During Week

Eight State societies will hold their annual spring dances this week. Visitors here for the Cherry Blossom Festival, and delegates to the D. A. R. convention are among those invited.

Four societies will dance Tuesday night. Nebraskans will meet in the Shoreham Hotel for dancing, cards, color movies and games, Howard Blanchard, president, announced. The Mississippi Society also will assemble in the Shoreham for a reception at 9 p. m. and dancing at 10, with D. A. R. delegates as honored guests.

West Virginians will hold their annual spring dance in the main ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel at 10 p. m., Tuesday, with reception at 9:30. The fifth inaugural of the Kentucky Derby will be celebrated by the Kentucky Society Tuesday at 9 p. m. in the Willard

On Wednesday night, the North Carolina Society of Washington will hold its annual election

Members of the Massachusetts Society will celebrate Patriots' Day Friday at 10 p. m. with a dance at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Iowans will hold their spring dance in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel Saturday

Charlottesville Reunion

Charlottesville, Va., April 13—Former member of the Monticello Guard, local military unit, will hold their third annual reunion tomorrow at the new city armory.

Senate Battle Due on Subsidy For Second Atlantic Air Line

By the Associated Press

A major Senate battle is in prospect this week on the question of mail subsidies for a second Transatlantic air line.

This issue is presented in the $1,152,372,632 Treasury-Postoffice supply bill to be brought up for debate tomorrow. By a 13 to 12 vote, the Senate appropriations committee included in the measure an $800,000 fund to pay American Export Airlines, Inc., for carrying mail on Transatlantic flights. The company proposes, if given a mail contract, to make one trip a week.

Leading the fight against mail subsidies for American Export Airlines was Chariman Bailey, (Democrat), North Carolina, of the Senate Commerce Committee. He prepared a minority report attacking the Appropriations Committee's action on the ground that it would permit a shipping company, American Export Lines, Inc., to enter airmail competition in violation of a congressional policy.

American Export Airlines is a subsidiary of American Export Lines, a shipping concern.

Another opponent, Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, said the shipping line was owned largely by Lehman Brothers, New York bankers, and that it held a "monopoly" on surface transportation to Europe.

Paul Bewshea, agent in the United States for British Overseas Airways, said in New York, meanwhile, that his corporation, through its operating company, Airways Atlantic, hoped to begin sending its flying boats between Britain and New York next month.

Henri Lesieur, traffic manager of Air France, the national line of the French government, arrived in New York two days ago and it was understood he was conferring with American aviation officials on the possibility of a series of flights by French planes.

The "Free French" government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle was reported in British trade journals to be surveying the possibility of setting up a Transatlantic service, to be operated by former French commercial pilots supporting the de Gaulle government.

Bishop Implies Willkie Broke Pledged Word

Seattle, April 13 (AP).—The Most Rev. Gerald Shaughnessy, Catholic Bishop of Seattle, assailed certain American public figures today, without mentioning their names, in an Easter sermon at pontifical mass in St. James Cathedral.

Bishop Shaughnessy

"Recently we witnessed an exciting national campaign and election in which specific statements were made and most solemn pledges given to our country, supposedly on the word of honor of a Christian gentleman.

"But a few days ago, when this person, whose later action belied his promises, was taxed with his own words, he lightly dismissed the subject with the revealing words, 'that was but campaign oratory.'

"Lying is thus enthroned before us as a public god and a means to which apparently our leaders, or would-be leaders, may resort with impunity."

(The incident to which Bishop Shaughnessy apparently referred occurred February 12 while Wendell Willkie was testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at a hearing on the lease-lend bill.

(Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, had quoted Willkie as saying last summer that America would be at war by April, 1941, if Roosevelt were reelected.

("That was just a bit of campaign oratory," Willkie said.)

The bishop also said a serious threat to the Nation had been made in the recommendation put forth by "one of the assistant attorney generals, in charge of antitrust prosecutions."

". . . By a strange quirk of fate and a most peculiar mentality he has publicly advocated that, in what is termed the present emergency, all the churches of the United States be, in effect, suppressed and in their place there be set up some invention of the Government that might perhaps be termed a state church.

". . . Today, leaders, or would-be leaders, of public opinion . . . are daily setting forth for the unwary a bread of advice and counsel that is leavened with the corrupted morals of a diseased mind."

At another point in his sermon, Bishop Shaughnessy assailed what he termed possible conscription of labor, capital and of women. Such moves, he said, "are the very evils that we decry throughout the world and which we ourselves would now madly embrace as the cure for home conditions . . ."

Communists, Bundists Blamed for Strikes

Raleigh, N. C., April 13 (AP).—Representative J. Buell Snyder (Democrat), Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Committee on Military Appropriations, tonight attributed "uncalled for" strikes in defense industries to a small percentage of Communists and Bundists in the ranks of labor.

He stopped at the Raleigh airport in an Army plane in which he has toured plane factories as far west as San Diego, Calif. "For anyone to deliberately sabotage in this emergency is treason and should be so treated," the Representative told reporters.

Ringside Table

EASTER WEEK PARADE. Spring fever is rampant in Washington's night spots. They've gone berserk in bringing out nationally known stars and ultra-dashing floor shows for Easter week. It's a holiday blitzkreig of blondes, blarney and beautiful balminess. Following communiques tell the story:

Eddie White, recently starred at the Earle Theater, will arrive in Paul Young's tomorrow eve for a one-week engagement. He's one of the country's topflight emcees, commands a salarly that has the P. Young cash registers shuddering in anticipation.

GENE KRUPA AND JIMMIE LUNCEFORD and their orchestras will fight a melodic free-for-all at Turner's Arena tomorrow night in "Dancecapades of 1941." Krupa, champion of drummers, is challenging up-and-coming Jimmy Lunceford. No beats will be barred and the winnah will receive a silver loving cup from a select panel of Washington jive experts. Senor Turner's Arena will be arranged with a ring for the orchestras, dancing space adjoining, plenty of sitting room for those who prefer to only listen . . . Promoters of the "Dancecapades" promise Tommy Dorsey or Tony Pastor as their next attraction.

MARJORIE GAINESWORTH, noted soprano, opens in Troika tonight. You've probably heard her often in the less intimate setting of theaters, though she's also appeared in the country's most chi-chi niteries. Rosita Rios will say "hasta la vista" to Troika after tonight's show.

THE MUSIC HALL BOYS return to the Shoreham tonight by popular demand, and we mean popular demand. These moustachioed old dandies evoke so much applause that the bandstand does a rumba. Shoreham patrons have evolved a technic of rhymthic paddy-whacking only given to the Music Hall Boys. It gives Maestro Barnee the leaping jitters. But what can he do? Beauteous Vera Fern and Jack Spot, the "Duke on Wheels," are also in the revue.

"THE SPRINGTIME REVUE" will gladden the Casino Royal for the first time tonight. Blossoming picture dances and playful novelty numbers by the eye-teasing Kretzlow dancers. New Manhattan principals, also the feathery stepping of Phyllis Merrill and spectacular stunts of the Belmont Brothers. Jack Schafer's songs are the special spring tonic . . . Head Waiter Lee Roy is about to wed Miss Leona Wa, of Detroit.

"THE SWINGETTE REVUE" will debut at Lotus today amid a blaze of bolero and conga dancing of the most elegant "Good Neighbor" variety. An ensemble of pastel flower costumes will do homage to the holiday season . . . Lolita Maya, brilliant Pan-American dancer from New York's La Conga, will head a vaudeville line-up including the dancing Laska Sisters from Chicago and Kay and Kay, boy and girl deredevils.

"Ha-Cha" Gardner, of the Mayflower Lounge, will open his Club Ha-Cha up near Frederick about the last of May.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN WAY has exerted its magnetism on Proprietor Raymond Lurba, of the Neptune Room. He's off to South America for a glorious two-month vacation. Handsome bon voyage gifts were presented to him at the recent "First Nighters' Party" in Neptune. They ranged from luxury luggage to an uncanny "fish caller" designed by jokester Fred Orsinger, head man of the Commerce Department Aquarium . . . Neptune's Anniversary Week, just closed, was a cyclonic success, with much credit due to that ingenious gentleman, publicist Frank Romer . . . The Dalton Boys will hold a rodeo of barbership quartets tomorrow eve.

JOSE AND PAQUITA, whose magical Mexican dances hold La Salle Versailles patrons in becharmed attention, were appearing in Abbazia, Italy, at the outbreak of the war. They smartly took the first boat back to the Western Hemisphere.

FLASHES OF RAZZ-MA-TAZZ. The swing polka executed in the Pall Mall Room by the Arthur Murray dancers. Such finger-snapping and stomping . . Drummer "Murph" Heller's soloing with Carmen Cavallaro's band in the Cosmos Room. He calls it "Cuban jive" . . . The way that Cecilia, of Ciro's Famous Village, rolls her big biack eyes when she sings "Mama Yo Quiero" . . . That hoppety-hop that Sid Foster does in Jack Coffey's revue in the Metronome Room. He looks like Seabiscuit in slow motion . . . The dizzy whackeroo of drummer Sammy Ferro, with Paul Kain's band at Glen Echo. If Sammy ever tires of drumming, he can always get a job clowning with Ringling.

JOE BROWNE,
of the Gentlemen of Rhythm. He's Mayfair's new glamour boy

Olmsted's luxury Easter dinner yesterday was such a success that it's planned to feature a series of super-menus on Sunday. Lobster, squab and the choicest steer beef will be featured.

ROAMIN' IN THE GLOAMIN'. Maestro Milton Davis says that the Rainbow Room orchestra will be wearing uniforms of "aviation blue" this summer . . . Martha Raye and her finance, Neal Lang, spent two evenings in the King Cole Room last week . . . The reason people look up at the Lounge Riviera is because it has the only mirrored ceiling in town. Perhaps you'd like to roll your own second sentence on this . . . Cultured Al Gomez, of Don Carper's Four at Cafe Caprice, spends most of his spare time at the Smithsonian Institution . . . Andy Miller, chef and part owner of Restaurant "823," dropped into the Hi Hat to relax. He was trying to gain back two pounds he'd just lost in the Ambassador Health Club . . . Charlie Braden, partner in the new Plymouth, has just bought a new suburban home, and now he's looking for a farm.

LOVELY LUCILLE LINCOLN, newly arrived in the Anchor Room, looks more like movie material than a handwriting expert. But her shrewd reading of character as shown in handwriting is something amazing. She comes from Indiana, Pa., also the home town of Jimmie Stewart, prize-winning cinema star.

D. C. Playground Kite Contest To Be Held Friday

Washington's annual playground kite contest, sponsored by the Community Center and Playgrounds Department, will be held Friday at noon at seven playgrounds. Contestants will be divided into three classes: Midget, under 11; junior, 11 to 15, and senior, 15 and over.

Locations and chairmen will be Banneker Recreation Center, David Brown; Rose Park Glayground, Walter Brooks; Randall Recreation Center, Clarence Pendleton; Langston Terrace, Milton Larry; Deanwood, Sylvester Hall; Anacostia, James White, and Dunbar Stadium, William Temple, jr.

Kites will be judged according to construction (plane or cell), workmanship, design and performance. Awards will be certificates and ribbons to holders of first, second and third places in each contest. Winners in each class will compete for city championship and cups for those taking first place in each division at Banneker Center the same afternoon at 3.

Walter Brooks and Fletcher Turner are chairmen of the tournament.

South's Mine Owners Offer 11% Pay Rise

By the Associated Press

New York, April 13.—Thirteen Southern coal operators reiterated through a spokesman today they were willing to grant an 11 per cent wage increase to the United Mine Workers of America (C.I.O.) and "begin operation of the coal mines at once."

The Southern operators bolted the 8-State Appalachian wage conference Friday, principally because of a union demand to eliminate the North-South wage differential, deadlocking negotiations covering 441,000 soft coal miners who have been idle since April 1.

L. Ebersole Gaines, chairman of the Southern Coal Operators Wage Conference, declared in a statement the South's position "has not been clearly stated," adding his group had "offered to pay a wage increase of 11 per cent, to continue negotiations for the purpose of adjusting all differences without sacrifice of principles of either party, and to begin operation of the coal mines at once."

Ask Consideration

"We ask that this proposal be given full consideration to the end that the present situation may be brought to a conclusion," said Gaines. "We are willing to carry out these provisions without bargaining in advance with our Government."

Gaines declared the contract which Northern operators have indicated they would sign was unsatisfactory to his group "because it provides increase of wages beyond that which the industry can afford. It adds substantial additional burdens and cost to the South, over and above that which it adds to the North by the elimination of long well-established differential and reject clauses, and it provides vacations with pay that are not either wise in the public interest or within the economic power of our part of the industry to pay.

"We recognize the right of the Northern operators and the United Mine Workers to enter into a separate contract if they so desire, but we insist that such contract shall not carry with it any provision that is prejudicial to the rights of the Southern operators."

Utilities Turn to Oil

The group represents about one-third of the commercial coal produced by members of the Appalachian Conference.

Gaines said that numerous utilities in the last week had switched from the use of coal in blast furnaces to oil, and that numerous defense plants had complained about the coal shortage and threatened to begin using oil.

Under present arrangements, Northern operators pay $6 a day, Southern operators $5.60. The Northerners have agreed to a $1 raise to $7, but the best offer made thus far by the Southerners is a 60-cent increase to $6.20.

A meeting of the joint Appalachian Conference will be held in the Hotel Biltmore here tomorrow at 2 p. m. W. E. F. Koepler, secretary of the Southern group, said that the 13 operators would not attend this conference.

Dr. Cannon, Astronomer, Dies at 77

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., April 13.—Dr. Annie Jump Cannon, of Harvard, most famous woman astronomer in the world, died tonight at a hospital after a month's illness. She was 77.

Miss Cannon, who had been officially retired from Harvard last September, had been working at the Harvard Observatory on a special astronomical commission from Yale up to a few weeks ago.

Associates at the observatory had expected that she would return to her post in a few weeks.

In her life work at Harvard, she classified more stars than any other person in the world, being credited with the classification of almost 400,000 stellar bodies according to their spectra.

She also was the discoverer of more than 300 variable stars, 5 novae and 1 spectroscopic binary, or double star.

A native of Dover, Del., she was interested in astronomy as a child, and made observations with the aid of a smoking candle from a candelabrum, which even today rests in the living room of her tiny residence, Star Cottage, close by Harvard Observatory.

She was the first woman ever to receive an honorary doctor's degree from Oxford University, and was the first woman ever to be elected an officer of the American Astronomical Society.

In 1929, she was listed among 12 "greatest living American women" chosen by the National League of Women Voters.

Her greatest single achievement was the classification of a quarter of a million stars to make up the famed Henry Draper catalogue for international use—a work that won her the Henry Draper medal of the National Academy of Sciences in 1931.

Miss Cannon since has worked on the extension of that catalogue, and in her most recent work for Yale, was engaged in a "wholesale" classification of stars in a selected zone extending all around the heavens.

A graduate Wellesley in 1884, she came to Harvard as an assistant in 1897.

She was stationed at Harvard Observatory in Arequipa, Peru, for a time, and in 1911 became curator of astronomical photographs at Harvard. In 1938, she was named William Cranch Bond astronomer.

Drawings Made For One-Act Play Tourney

Drawings for positions in the one-act play tournament of the Community Center and Playgrounds Department, May 5-10, were announced yesterday. Positions were drawn by a committee composed of Miss Gertrude Parthenia McBrown, chairman; Bernard Pryor, and Horace Randolph.

May 5, plays to be presented at 8:15 p. m. will be "The Desperationist," Community Players; "Miss or Mrs.," Bureau of Engraving and Printing Dramatic Club, and "That's My Baby," Community Dramatic Players.

May 7, "E. Pluribus," Howard Players; "The Mother Who Went Away," St. Cyprian's Sunday School Club, and "Wienies on Wednesday," Cardozo Night Players.

May 10, "Hot Lemonade," Shiloh Players; "Cloudburst," The Maskers, and "The Boor," Excelsior Dramatic Arts Club.

Chairmen of tournament committees are Miss McBrown, coordinator; Miss Etta Johnson, general arrangements; Joseph Cole, business manager; Lymas C. Speed, publicity; Bernard Pryor, rules; Horace Randolph, stage manager, and Mrs. Helen Mason, costumes.

Christ's Realm Based on Love, Says Dr. Abbot

Preaching his fourth Easter morning sermon at First Congregational Church, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, contrasted the lives and philosophies of Jesus Christ and Julius Caesar.

Born comparatively few years apart and possessing the same initials, they had little else in common, said Dr. Abbot, who is president of the First Congregational Society.

Both aspired to wide dominion but Caesar's motive "was ruthless self-seeking" while Christ's "was all-embracing love."

Both have been imitated for 2,000 years but while adherents of the one have "risen on the waves of commotion" and "gratified their pride of ambition by attaining places of great power," those of the other "have genuinely loved the people, have striven to improve them and often, like him, have been scorned and sacrificed."

The lay speaker pointed out that both obtained kingdoms. Caesar's "founded by war, bloodshed and misery, and eventually destroyed by war, bloodshed and misery."

"Jesus Christ's Kingdom," he said, "was founded in the spiritual realm, extended by the inspirations of love and reason, and its duration is from everlasting to everlasting. Its subjects are retained solely by their own choice.

"We have now come to a time when Caesar's methods, reinforced by modern scientific discoveries, are being used to set up extensive new realms.

"Whether called by the names of communism, fascism or nazism," Dr. Abbot said, "these new systems are fundamentally opposed to the principles of Christianity. Their leaders seek actively by oppression, propaganda, butchery and war to suppress it.

"It behooves every Christian to use every effort to overcome these dangerous enemies," he declared, "for to what end does God endow us with minds and capacities? Shall we expect Him to fight our battles if we disuse the talents we have received from Him?"

Stove Sets Fire To Room, Woman Burns to Death

A 40-year-old woman was burned to death yesterday morning when an overheated stove set fire to her room in a boarding house at 1505 P Street Northwest.

Firemen found Elizabeth Jackson, 40, colored, unconscious in the bathroom next to her second-floor room. Her clothes were still smoldering, they said, adding that she had apparently tried to reach water and failed.

Defense Training Off to Flying Start In Montgomery

Courses intended to produce skilled workers for America's defense industries have got off to a flying start in Montgomery County, Md.

Classes in blueprint reading and airplane mechanics have been started at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, and are offered free of charge to persons between the ages of 17 and 25 and out of school. The classes in airplane mechanics, taught by Andrew Huffard, meet five days a week, Monday through Friday, from 6:30 to 9:30 p. m. The class in blueprint reading, taught by Austin E. Gisriel, meets three times a week on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, from 6:10 to 9:30.

Classes in typing and shorthand are being conducted at Montgomery Blair High School in Silver Spring for beginners and advanced students. The classes are held Monday and Thursday nights, from 7:30 to 9:30.

Biggers Sees Real Production

Cincinnati, April 12 (AP).—John D. Biggers, director of production of the Office of Production Management, told the Cincinnati Army Ordnance Association post tonight that "the days of educational orders are now past" and production of numerous important defense items on which industry has worked for several months is expectable within "100 days."

Itemizing ordnance production, Biggers said 30-calibre machine guns were close to schedule, 50-calibre guns "right up to the notch;" and small arms such as rifles and sub-machine guns "ahead of schedule."

All of these, he asserted, must be increased from 100 to 1,000 per cent "before the year ends."

America's production of small arms ammunition, described by Biggers as "a crucial item," has increased 1,000 per cent in the last nine months, he said, but "further great increases are demanded and must be achieved."

Biggers predicted strikes would stop "as soon as people understand the importance of the National defense program."

"You savvy quick, soldier," he says to his son as that chip off the old block in the new uniform proffers Camels. "These were practically 'regulation' cigarettes with the army men I knew. Lots of other things have changed, but not a soldier's 'smokin's.'"

Right! Today, and for more than 20 years, reports from Army Post Exchanges show that Camels are the favorite. In Navy canteens, too, Camels are preferred.

Just seems that Camels click with more people than any other cigarette—whether they're wearing O.D., blues, or civvies. You'll savvy, too—and quick—with your first puff of a slower-burning Camel with its extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor, why it's the "front-line" cigarette!

Pan American Day

When this hemisphere observes Pan American Day today, it will be in an atmosphere of growing and practical friendship. Schools, colleges, commercial and social groups and governments will participate in a demonstration of the peace and collaboration of an entire continent which is in such startling contrast to other continents. Uppermost in the minds of our neighbors will be the fact that the hands-off policy contained in the Pan Americanization of the Monroe Doctrine is now, in part at least, a law of the United States. Last week the President signed a resolution adopted by Congress binding our Nation to oppose transfer of foreign possessions on this side of the ocean to any non-American power. The measure strengthens pledges already made to safeguard and defend, if necessary, the integrity of the Western World. But that is only one item in daily progress toward better defenses and better mutual understanding. Students from our neighbor countries are in our universities; South American journalists, as guests of our newspapers, are writing of their native lands for us and interpreting our own life to their peoples at home; the air waves transmit our good wishes to friends below the border, and the press makes articulate the popular desire so to orient ourselves as to tighten these hemispherical bonds. This should be the best Pan American Day yet.

The National Industrial Conference Board, in noting that the District had a higher per capita income in 1940 than any State, warns that the figures include the incomes paid here of many persons who live in Maryland and Virginia. Some idea of the extent to which this is true may be gained from the discovery by the Virginia Chamber of Commerce that the portion of the State in the Washington metropolitan area grew in the last decade by 74 per cent to a total population of 103,662. Though much of the addition is composed of persons serving Federal employes commercially in their home communities outside of Washington, and though some normal growth may be taken for granted, the greater part of the increase is due to the influx of Uncle Sam's workers who draw their salaries in the District. The result is that a large part of the apparent wealth reported here is beyond the reach of the District tax collector. The difficulties of touching this particular source of revenue are almost insurmountable. Serious efforts to do so have not extended beyond attempts to make nearby residents subject to the District income tax insofar as the District levy exceeds the State tax. Practically such a regulation would have no effect, for Maryland and Virginia income taxes are higher than the District's.

But there is another loophole acting as a detriment to District finance which is not evident from the Conference Board's report. Through the rulings of the courts and the perennial reluctance of the House to pass an air-tight income-tax law for the District, numerous persons actually living here are excused from paying because they claim domicile in far-away States. Amendments offered to the tax laws this year would have forced these persons to file returns in the District. Though the plan would permit the District to collect from them only any excess of the local tax over their State levies, the theory was that some at least would transfer their allegiance to Washington to avoid filing two returns and to take advantage of the lower District levies. Also, the District would be enabled to collect from persons living here but domiciled in States having no income tax, and from any who used their domicile as an excuse for paying no taxes anywhere. This bill was attacked with a host of modifications and finally was withdrawn from the House floor for redrafting.

The Corporation Counsel's office has been revising the proposed income tax amendments, but it will be up to House sponsors to decide whether the new version will deal with the domicile issue, or be confined to several unrelated clarifying clauses which were minor features of the original bill. In the meantime Representative Moser has introduced legislation which would force all Federal employes here to pay District income taxes unless they produce certificates of non-imposing defense taxes and a payment from the States where they claim domicile. Mr. Moser's plan is more limited than the earlier proposal, but even the passage of this measure would be welcome to the District in its battle to win a fair share in the affluence revealed by the Conference Board.

Muscovite Maneuver

The Napoleonic wars are coming irresistibly to mind as the model for the permutations, the changes of front, and the kaleidoscopic happenings and lightning strokes which characterize World War II. Take, for instance, the relations between Soviet Russia and Japan. Again and again in the period after 1933 Soviet Russia sought to conclude a nonaggression pact with Japan. The purpose was obvious. The rise of Nazi Germany constituted a grave potential menace to the Soviet union, and to meet the threat effectively Moscow sought to free its hands in Asia. But the Japanese militarists who for so long have ruled the roost in Tokyo were disdainful of the Russian olive branch. They had no intention of abandoning, even for the brief period in which totalitarian nations live up to treaty obligations, their long-held ambitions in Eastern Siberia, Outer Mongolia, Russian Sakhalin. While relations between Moscow and Tokyo remained outwardly correct, accordingly, they never became what one might call even by a stretch of the imagination friendly.

On the contrary, Russia and Japan faced each other across the Siberian-Manchurian frontier and the Sea of Japan as potential adversaries, and sometimes clashed in border frays along the Amur and in Mongolia. Moreover, Japan and Germany five years ago concluded their anti-Comintern pact, which was clearly pointed at Russia. Moscow hit back by giving aid to the Chinese Nationalist forces under Chiang Kai-shek in their battle against the Japanese invaders. Seemingly militarist Japan could never forgive this riposte. But the god of expediency which the Nipponese serve has called for readjustments. The war in China has sapped Japan's strength. Only by bold action in southeastern Asia, which is always possible while Hitler is winning in Europe, can the Japanese recoup their losses in China. Here is where Soviet Russia comes in. No step in southeastern Asia is possible with a hostile Russia on Japan's flank. For a conflict over the Dutch East Indies and Malaya might give Russia an opportunity to make gains at Japan's expense in the North.

With the signature of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact, however, Japan has now been given the green light for any adventures she may decide to embark on in southeastern Asia. Russia has agreed to respect the "territorial inviolability" of Manchukuo in return for a similar pledge by Japan with regard to Outer Mongolia. If these assurances are given credence in Tokyo, it will now be possible for the Island Empire to remove troops facing Russian-held territory for action elsewhere. In other words, Russia is making herself the accomplice before the fact for further Japanese aggressions in Asia, even as by the August, 1939, pact with Hitler she had previously performed the same role for Germany.

It must now be evident to the most shallow mind that Moscow's role in the world's strife is the most devious of all. She applied the match, and now she seems bent upon keeping the conflagration ablaze. The agreement with Tokyo may enable her to concentrate her forces against a possible Nazi thrust in the direction of the Ukraine and the Caucasus. There are signs, at any rate, that the bloom is beginning to fade from the Ribbentrop-Molotoff agreement. But there are as yet no indications that Russia is prepared to make a real about-face in her relations with Germany. Viewed even in the most favorable light, the Russo-Japanese pact of neutrality is bad news for China, Great Britain and the United States.

Problem Of Function

The searching cross-examination to which the House Military Affairs Committee subjected Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins last Wednesday was noticeably sharp and indiscriminately critical. Most members of the committee seemed unable to grasp the fact that the Conciliation Service of the Department of Labor is concerned with the settling of disputes, not with the determination of their causes. Time and time again Miss Perkins was challenged because her conciliators had not tried to find out whether Communists had actively fomented trouble in plants working on defense orders. Some committee members even implied that the conciliators of the Labor Department ought to inquire into the merits of workers' demands for wage increases and the effect of such demands upon the cost of the defense program. These are highly important issues, but clearly they are not the concern of the men who are called in to compose disputes between employers and employes. As Miss Perkins pointed out repeatedly, the task of the conciliator is to bring the parties to a dispute together. A conciliator who turned detective or sat as judge by passing on the merits of a dispute would at once become persona non grata. Furthermore, as Miss Perkins explained, the Department of Justice is the accredited agency for finding out whether subversive elements department would rightly resent interference by amateur detectives in other Government departments. Whatever dark suspicions may exist among members of the House Military Affairs Committee concerning the radical sympathies of the head of the Department of Labor, accordingly, they are certainly directing their assault from a wrong angle in attacking the Conciliation Service for not undertaking detective work calculated to destroy confidence in the impartiality of the conciliators and thus render them useless.

Resilient Mr. Ford

It has become an event when Mr. Henry Ford changes his mind, partly because he is a great general of industry and a man prone to take a hand in public affairs, but mainly because he swears so violently he will ne'er consent before consenting. Illustrations prior to his change of front on collective bargaining come readily to mind. Mr. Ford long ago took a very determined position on the color of his automobiles. That was in the days of Model T, and Mr. Ford used to advertise that the customer could have any color he pleased, "provided it was black." He had got over this hearse-like prejudice by the time he began to encounter real competition and decided to abandon Model T. In the new car the customer could have any color he wished, from desert gray to Chanel green. As a businessman, of course, he realized that success in business depends upon catering to whims, but to those of his customers, not his own. But Mr. Ford is made of tough individualistic fiber, and he again began to mix prejudices in his business when the long debate began on prohibition. So stubborn was his stand on this vexed subject that he once declared that not another car would come off his assembly lines if the Volstead Act were repealed. The threat, however, did not touch John Q. Citizen. The act was repealed, and then Mr. Ford's desire to stay in business proved mightier than his determination to carry out his threat. Cars continued to pour out of the River Rouge plant, Volstead Act or no Volstead Act. Then there was the case of the Dearborn Independent, which remained rabidly anti-Semitic as long as Model T occupied a dominant position in the low-price-car field. But even this campaign was abandoned when Mr. Ford, his business instincts rising above his individual prejudices, embarked upon the manufacture of modern cars, and he blandly announced that he had never read any of the racial blasts in his newspaper. Inconsistency is so far from being a blot on a man's escutcheon that few public men and certainly no businessmen have been guiltless of it. As for lesser mortals, they like to feel that in their departures from rigidity, they are proving the truth of the Emersonian aphorism that consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds.

Jackal Role

Not long ago Hungary signed a pact of "eternal" friendship with Yugoslavia. Undoubtedly the late Count Teleki, who was instrumental in making that agreement, was entirely sincere in wanting to maintain good relations between his country and the neighboring kingdom. But the men who have succeeded him—he committed suicide when he found that his country was about to be used as a corridor for an attack on Yugoslavia—are of a different breed. With Yugoslavia under fierce assault from the Nazis and the bulk of the Yugoslav army withdrawn to the mountainous region of the south, the temptation for Hungary to play the jackal role has become too great to be resisted, even as was the case after Munich. So the Hungarian army has cooperated with the Nazis in the criminal assault on a brave nation which chose to fight even against hopeless odds rather than permit its land to be used, as Hungary and Rumania and Bulgaria are being used, as tools of Nazi policy.

Actually there is not the slightest practical long-range advantage which Hungary can derive from her ignominious conduct. If Hitler wins the war, Hungary will enjoy no greater independence than is enjoyed by any of his present victims. Any territorial gains by her will be for Germany's benefit, not Hungary's. If, on the contrary, Hitler is defeated, Hungary will come before the bar of world opinion with hands besmirched by a cowardly deed. The Magyar boast of Magyar honor and sportsmanship will have a hollow ring for many people today.

Will We Be Too Late?

Hitler has said he need not worry about the United States. We would not unite in time. Our production would be too little and too late.

Surely Mr. Hitler was not right! Surely he did not know more about us than we did ourselves! Surely we think more of the country than of our own particular aims and ambitions! Surely we will all sacrifice for the national good, for the defense of our country!

We cannot believe that the American people will go on bickering and squabbling while world order comes down around us, and our last powerful ally is beaten to her knees by starvation, while our goods, already reduced in volume by industrial strife, are strewn about the bottom of the ocean, because we lack the guts to risk our precious necks, for our own security.

No. Our country was not founded that way. Our ancestors did not hesitate to face sacrifices. Neither will we, their descendants. No. Mr. Hitler you are wrong!

Idle Machinery

Idle machinery means money wasted. The public is paying great sums in taxes and will pay even more in the future in order to keep that machinery going for our national defense. Why, then, should one element of our population be allowed to keep that machinery at a standstill, seriously impairing the welfare of the whole? If the Administration would do an about-face and admit that strikes are rapidly reaching critical proportions, and, as it has proven so capable of doing in past emergencies, take complete control of the situation, it will, as one taxpayer sees it, have done a noble deed worth shouting about. Mr. Roosevelt might even perhaps open a 1944 campaign speech by saying, "My friends, in 1941, when our country was in the throes of the great strike epidemic which threatened to sabotage our national defense, we, etc., etc."

Stamp News Praised

I would like to take this opportunity of conveying to you the appreciation of the Collectors Club of Washington, which I represent this year as president, for the very fine manner in which your stamp editor, Mr. William M. Stuart, has been covering the activities of our club in the Sunday Post. The Collectors Club of Washington is probably the largest and most active local stamp club in the United States, and largely through Mr. Stuart's column its activities are regularly reported to stamp collectors in Washington and vicinity.

It is probably unnecessary for me to tell you how widespread the interest in stamp collecting has become, and Washington is one of the leading cities in philatelic importance. Therefore, it is natural that we, who are interested in this hobby, follow closely the publicity it receives. Mr. Stuart's column is devoted mainly to actual stamp news, which is proper. However, more news of the local stamp clubs and their activities could be displayed if more space is allotted the stamp editor, and it is hoped that this may be possible as time goes on. I personally have heard many fine compliments paid your paper for its stamp column and hobby page generally.

I think that both your paper and your local stamp fraternity are most fortunate in having a person of Mr. Stuart's ability in a position where so much good work can be done.

Trading In Futures

In view of the fact that great public problems accumulate upon us and continue to remain unsolved, many people naturally assume that there has been a serious failure on the part of education. Educators, on the other hand, point out that imputations of their failures are usually made in terms both vague and general.

It is possible, however, to be specific.

The problem of ruinously low agricultural prices is no doubt the result of definite causes. If our educators have discovered what those causes are, they have failed to make their findings public. They have not neglected, however, in their departments of economics, to support the present racketeering method of fixing low prices by means of the device of futures trading, to treat the farm problem as insoluble, and to advocate, as a necessary alternative, the giving of Federal subsidies to the farmers.

Economists, copying from each other, and on each other's authority, have definitely agreed on a false definition of the "futures contract," as a result of which the weight of the authority of the schools has been thrown in favor of the market racketeers. That false definition, copied from Gemmill's "Fundamentals of Economics," is as follows: "A futures contract may be defined as a contract for the sale of a stipulated amount of a specified grade of some commodity at a fixed price at a future date."

The following facts, well known to futures traders, show how false is that definition:

1. Those who buy wheat futures contracts, for example, as a matter of customary practice think alone in terms of price differences, not in terms of wheat of a specified grade.

2. The wheat futures contract does not permit the naming of a specified grade of wheat.

3. One who buys a wheat futures contract has nothing to say, when on rare occasions delivery is made, about what kind or grade of wheat he shall receive.

4. The determination of what kind or grade of wheat is to be delivered, under a futures contract, is at the option of the seller of the contract, resulting often in the delivery of a "skin grade" of wheat, fit only for chicken feed.

5. Deliveries of wheat of any grade, under wheat futures contracts, are negligible.

6. Those who wish, in good faith, to buy a specified grade of wheat, either for spot delivery or for delivery-to-arrive, buy it in the cash (merchandise) market, not in the futures market.

Any self-respecting economist, with a fair sense of professional pride, might be expected to meet the challenge of these facts. None of them, however, have ever been known to do so. It is no wonder that our so-called civilization is a confused mess, since our intellectual leaders do so sadly fail to face the facts.

ERNEST D. MacDOUGALL.

Washington, April 10.

Of Bargaining

It is reliably reported that "before leaving (Detroit) Murray (C. I. O.) had given the Governor and Dewey a list of irreducible demands of the union and had left complete instructions with R. I. Thomas, U. A. W president, on further moves."

Presume this is what he and other labor heads call "bargaining to reach an amicable agreement."

Suppose Ford had done the same thing with regard to his company? Murray would have been the first to cry to high heaven that Ford had refused to bargain.

E. L. MESSLER.

Pittsburgh, April 10.

The Futility Of A Passive Defense

Having underwritten British victory by the passage of the lend-lease bill, it is up to the American public for their own safety to demand of the Congress and the Administration vigorous and courageous action in carrying out this measure regardless of the consequences. Everyone recognizes that we are in the midst of an undeclared war against the Axis powers and that for weal or for woe we cannot turn back except at our peril. We must make good on our guarantee of British victory or suffer the fate that has befallen every European nation that has dallied on the banks of doubt.

The whole history of the present war has proved the futility of a passive defense. Aggressive and determined action now is the only thing that will save American democracy. Should Britain fall, and even though we had her navy, we would be confronted with the problem of immediately seizing Dakar and Singapore and intermediate bases. If we did not, the entire Western Hemisphere, with these two bases in Axis hands, would lie in the jaws of a mighty pincer from which in time the South American continent could be infiltrated and conquered and the Panama Canal made indefensible.

The loss of the Panama Canal and the freedom of the seas would put the United States in the position of the British Isles today—an island empire confined to the North American Continent. In these circumstances could we survive and maintain our way of life?

What measures then are of immediate consideration? To the objective observer it would appear that our Government should arrange immediately with the British government the taking over of the naval defenses of Singapore and the policing of the Pacific. The basing of our fleet at Singapore would release badly needed British naval units for the Battle of the Atlantic.

It is futile to vote billions for defense materials for Britain and the embattled democracies and permit them to be sunk. Face this situation realistically, and in conjunction with the British, work out a joint air and naval convoy system. The employment of our air and naval units would be invaluable training for them and add to their efficiency.

Finally, the declaration of a full national emergency would have a salutary effect on public opinion and bring home to all the seriousness of the present situation—a situation which the public seems unwilling to accept and act upon. Time is the essence of the present situation and will brook no delay. Self-deception, selfishness and fear are the rotten roots that will bring about the destruction of our democracy unless as a united people we have the courage to face these hidden foes realistically.

Finlay And His Clock

"Honeymoon couple?" I asked.

"Which? Those two?" my new acquaintance counter-questioned, an agreeable fellow-inmate of my seaside hotel with whom I was having a drink. "What makes you think so?"

"Oh, I don't know—they seem so devoted. And I noticed a certain diffidence when they arrived and signed the register. And they seem to be avoiding other people—including yourself, though I gather they know you."

My friend smiled. "Yes, they know me. Or he does—Finlay is his name. Not that I know him well—but I know about him. A very interesting case, too. A case of complete change of characteristics."

I looked my question.

"He used to be a victim of superstition, and he used to be devoted to his wife, and to consider deceit of any sort the most unpardonable offense."

"I don't know about the superstitious part," I said, "but surely you can't tell me he's just pretending to be devoted. Just look at them." The couple, in fact, were dancing as though completely alone in the world.

"I know." My friend smiled again. "Let me tell you about him and you'll know why. As I told you, Finlay was full of superstitions—ladder, black cats, thirteens, all that kind of stuff. But his principal belief——"

"Not so loud," I said, for the two were now dancing quite close to us.

"That's all right. He's a little deaf. I should have mentioned that before. Anyway, his principal belief was that if and when an old grandfather clock of his stopped, he would die. Not an uncommon superstition, and supported, in his case, by stories of the death of his father and grandfather. A lot of nonsense, of course—but very hard on the fellow's wife."

"His wife?"

"Yes. You see, Finlay made it her business to keep the clock going. He would know, he used to say, when she had stopped loving him—she wouldn't wind the clock. And as she was a forgetful sort of person, and he was forever looking at the clock and talking about it, the business got on her nerves. She even thought seriously about smashing it, or selling it or something, but eventually she had a brighter idea. Finlay had to go out of town on business, and while he was gone, and without saying a word to him, she had the clock turned into an electric clock. Cost a lot, but in her opinion it was worth it. I told you Finlay was a little deaf. Well, that's what made it possible—he wouldn't be apt to notice that even though the hands continued to revolve, the clock had stopped ticking.

"And that's what happened—he never noticed; and all was well then—his wife could forget about the clock without fear of being accused of unfaithfulness. Actually, her innocent deceit seemed to have buttressed both his happiness and hers, and all went smoothly until one day both Finlay and his wife were going away, but not together. He was going on a business trip, and she to visit her parents. She had left early in the morning, taking the car. His train wasn't to leave until 3, so he came home from the office at noon, got himself some lunch, then sat down to smoke a cigarette. He looked at the old clock—a quarter to two. He thought of his wife and smiled. He closed his eyes—he dozed, and woke up with a start. But it was all right, he saw. Five minutes past two by the famous old clock. Another cigarette——

"And suddenly Finlay realized that, though his cigarette was nearly finished, the clock still showed the time to be five after two.

"Imagine his feelings. He went and put his ear as close to the clock-face as he could get it—he couldn't hear a thing. Not a doubt about it—the clock had stopped. His wife hadn't wound it. Another thought flashed into his mind—she hadn't gone to her mother at all. Suppose he called up and asked——

"He looked at his watch. Seven minutes past three! He'd never make it now, and it was terribly important that he did.

"He dashed out into the street. Not a taxi in sight. Wait—there was a car driven by a girl. He waved frantically, so frantically that she pulled up.

"'I'm in a desperate hurry—catch a train—d'you mind—?' he gabbled at her.

"She was the right kind of girl. 'Hop in,' she said."

"Yes, but I don't see——" I began, as my friend paused.

"Wait a minute," he said. "The first thing to note is that Finlay missed the train."

"Yes," I insisted, "but the clock stopped—and he's still alive. And I thought you said it was an electric clock."

"Right. The powerhouse had cut the juice off for a few minutes—they do that sometimes, you know. And, as you say, Finlay's still alive. That's what killed his superstition—if he had caught that train, he'd probably be dead. It was wrecked about an hour after he should have been on it. Yes, that killed his superstition."

"But his wife had deceived him, messing around with the clock, turning it into a soulless electric affair. How could he forgive her for that? Didn't you say he considered deceit of any sort an unpardonable offense?" I called his attention to the couple, now dancing cheek-to-cheek. "By the evidence, he has not only forgiven her, but seems to be head-over-heels in love with her. How do you explain it?"

My friend stared at me. "Oh, I thought you understood," he said, "why Finlay was slightly embarrassed when he saw me—why there was that hesitation over the ceremony of registering. That's not Mrs. Finlay—that's the girl who gave him the lift."

Pope's Message

'Little Likelihood Of Just Peace'

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 13.—The partial English text of Pope Pius XII's Easter message follows:

We most cordially greet you all, beloved sons and daughters of Rome and of the entire world, in the spirit of Alleluia of Easter morn, in the joyful spirit of the resurrection and peace in Christ, after the desolation of his Divine Passion. But, unfortunately, there has been no resurrection, no restoration of peace among nations and in our joyful greeting to you there must be intermingled that note of distress which was the cause of great sadness and continual sorrow to the heart of Paul the Apostle while he was occupied about his brethren who were his kinsmen according to the flesh (Romans ix:2).

In the lamentable spectacle of human conflict which we are now witnessing we acknowledge the valor and loyalty of all those who with a deep sense of duty are fighting for the defense and posterity of their fatherland; we recognize, too, the prodigious and in itself efficacious development made in industrial and technical fields; nor do we overlook the many generous and praiseworthy gestures of magnanimity which have been made toward the enemy: but while we acknowledge, we feel obliged nonetheless to state that the ruthless struggle has at times assumed forms which can be described as atrocious. May all belligerents, who also have human hearts molded by mothers' love, show some feeling of charity for the sufferings of civilian populations, for defenseless women and children, for the sick and aged, all of whom are often exposed to greater and more widespread perils of war than those faced by soldiers at the front.

WE BESEECH the belligerent powers to abstain until the very end from the use of still more homicidal instruments of warfare; for the introduction of such weapons inevitably results in their retaliatory use, often with greater violence by the enemy. Already we must lament the fact that the limits of legitimate warfare have been repeatedly exceeded, would not the more widespread use of increasingly barbarous offensive weapons soon transform war into unspeakable horror?

We have constantly accompanied prayer with our own endeavors. To the very limit of our power and with a vigilant consciousness of impartiality in spirit and in our apostolic office, we have left nothing undone or untried in order to forestall or shorten the conflict, to humanize the methods of war, to alleviate suffering and to bring assistance and comfort to the victims of war. We have not hesitated to indicate in unmistakenly clear terms the necessary principles and sentiments which must constitute the determining basis of a future peace that will assure the sincere and loyal consent of all peoples. But we are saddened to note that there seems to be as yet little likelihood of an approximate realization of peace that will be just, in accordance with human and Christian forms.

Thus our supplications to heaven must be raised with ever increasing meaning and fervor, that a new spirit may take root and develop in all peoples, and especially among those whose greater power gives them wider influence and imposes upon them additional responsibility; the spirit of willingness, devoid of sham and artifice, that is ready to make mutual sacrifices in order to build, upon the accumulated ruins of war, a new edifice of fraternal solidarity among the nations of the world, an edifice built upon new and stronger foundations, with fixed and stable guarantees, and with a high sense of moral sincerity which would repudiate every double standard of morality and justice for the great and the small or for the strong and the weak.

Truth, like man, has but a single face: and truth is our weapon, just as prayer is our defense and strength, and the living sincere and disinterested apostolic word inspired by fraternal affection, our entree to the hearts of men.

THESE ARE not offensive and bloody weapons, but the arms of spirit, arms of our mind and heart. Nothing can impede or restrain us from using them to secure and safeguard just rights, true human brotherhood and genuine peace, wherever the sacred duty of our office prompts us and compassion for the multitude rekindles our love.

Nothing can restrain us from repeatedly calling to the observance of the precept of love those who are children of the Church of Christ, those who because of their faith in the Divine Saviour or at least in our Father who is in heaven and very near to us.

Nothing can impede or restrain us from doing all in our power in order that, in the tempest of surging waves of enmity among the peoples of the earth, the divine ark of the Church of Christ may be held firmly by the anchor of hope under the golden rays of peace—that blessed vision of peace which, in the midst of worldly conflicts, is the refuge and abode and sustenance of that fraternal spirit, founded in God and ennobled in the shadow of the cross, with which the course must be set if we are to escape from the present tempest and reach the shore of a happier and more deserving future.

HOWEVER, under the vigilant Providence of God and armed only with prayer, exhortation and consolation, we shall persevere in our battle for peace in behalf of suffering humanity. May the blessings and comforts of Heaven descend on all victims of this war: upon you who are prisoners and upon your family from which you are separated and who are anxious about you; and upon you refugees and dispossessed who have lost your homes and land, your life's support. We share with you your anguish and suffering. If it is not allowed us—as we would honestly desire—to take upon ourselves the burden of your sorrows, may our paternal and cordial sympathy serve as the balm which will temper the bitterness of your misfortune with today's greeting of the Alleluia, the hymn of Christ's triumph over earthly martyrdom, the blossom of the olive tree of Gethsemane flourishing in the precious hope of resurrection and of the new and eternal life in which there will be neither sorrows nor struggles. In this vale of tears there is no lasting city (Hebrews, xiii:14), no eternal fatherland.

Here below we are all exiles and wanderers; our true citizenship, which is limitless, is in Heaven, in eternity, in God. If worldly hopes have bitterly deluded you remember that hope in God never fails or deceives. You must make one resolve—not to allow yourselves to be induced either by your sad lot or by the malice of men to waver in your allegiance to Christ.

PROSPERITY and adversity are part and parcel of man's earthly existence; but what is of the utmost importance, and we say it with St. Augustine, is the use that is made of what is called prosperity or adversity. For the virtuous man is neither exalted by worldly well-being nor humbled by temporary misfortune; the evil man on the other hand being corrupted in prosperity is made to suffer in adversity.

To the powers occupying territories during the war, we say with all due consideration: Let your conscience guide you in dealing justly, humanely and providently with the peoples of occupied territories. Do not impose upon them burdens which you in similar circumstances have felt or would feel to be unjust.

Prudent and helpful humanitarianism is the commendation and boast of wise generals; and the treatment of prisoners and civilians in occupied areas is the surest indication and proof of the civilization of individuals and nations. But above all remember that upon the manner in which you deal with those whom the fortunes of war put into your hands may depend the blessing or curse of God upon your own fatherland.

CONTEMPLATION of a war that is so cruel in all its aspects and the thought of the suffering children of the Church inspires in the heart of the Common Father and forms upon our lips words of comfort and encouragement for the pastors and faithful of those places where the Church, the Spouse of Christ, is suffering most; where fidelity to her, the public profession of her doctrines, the conscientious and practical observance of her laws, moral resistance to atheism and to de-Christianizing influences deliberately favored or tolerated, are being openly or insidiously proposed and daily in various ways made increasingly difficult.

The records and artifices of this generally secret and at times even public martyrdom, which insidious or open impiety makes followers of the crucified suffer, are multiplying daily and constitute as it were in an encyclopedia of many volumes, annals of heroic sacrifies, and furnish moving verification of the words of our Divine Savior: "The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you." (John, xv:20).

Is this divine warning not a source of tender comfort on that sorrowful and bittter Way of the Cross which you are following because of your fidelity to Christ? To all of you who are walking so sadly along this way, priests and religious, men and women, and particularly you young men, pride and joy of your families, who are called upon to bear the burden of these merciless and bitter days—whatever be your origin, language, race, social condition or profession all you upon whom the seal of suffering for Christ is stamped so clearly, a sign no less of suffering than of glory, as it was to the great Apostle Paul: you are numbered among those privileged intimate who are nearest to the Cross of Calvary, and by this very fact nearest also the pierced heart of Christ and to our own.

ON THAT WE were able to make you appreciate how profoundly our heart has been pierced by the cry of the Apostle of the Gentiles, "Who is weak, and I am not weak?" (II Corinthians, xi:29). The sacrifices you are called upon to make, your suffering in mind and body, your concern for your own faith and still more for the faith of your children, we are aware of them, we share them with you, we lament them before God.

And yet withal, on this day we greet you with joyful Alleluia; for it is the day of Christ's triumph over the crucifiers, open and secret, ancient and modern. We convey that greeting to you with the voice and confidence with which even in the days of the persecution of the early Christians exultantly sang that Alleluia. Perhaps you do not recall the words of our Lord to Martha: "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me shall not die forever." (John, xi:25-26.) The certainty they were assuring themselves of resurrection made of martyrs heroes of Christ and faithful unto death. You enjoy that same certainty. Imitate them and with the greatest prophet of the New and eternal Testament raise your eyes to that heavenly Jerusalem where Christ gloriously reigns and rules and while rewarding his good and faithful servants proclaims the mystery and splendor of their triumph in the shining whiteness of their garments, in the indelible inscription of their names in the book of life and in decreeing that they be exalted before His Father and the Heavenly Court, with admirable words which you in your perilous trials must never forget: "He that shall overcome shall thus be clothed in white garments and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life but I will confess his name before my Father and before His angels." (Apocalypse, iii:5).

BELOVED SONS and daughters! Jesus Christ, "Prince of Kings on earth who hath brought and washed us from our sin in His own blood" (Apocalypse, xv:15), raise your eyes while, as pledge of that heavenly peace which he alone can give to us and which we implore of Him in superabundant measure for all humanity, we impart to you, to pastors and faithful, to your families, to your children, that Christ may protect and keep you in his grace and love to those who in the fulfillment of duty are fighting on land and sea and in the sky and especially to all those who have been so severely lashed by the scourge of war with heart overflowing with love, our paternal apostolic benediction.

May the blessing of Almighty God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost descend upon you and remain forever. Amen.

Greenland: The Next Step

ON THE DEPRESSING but reliable principle that realistic thinking in a democracy feeds on a diet of disaster, recent events in the Mediterranean have abruptly changed the status of the convoy question. When public opinion comes alive, the President invariably seizes the chance to act. And action now seems to be at hand.

ALSOP

The action will apparently take the form of partial convoying, from American ports as far as the new, secretly established base in Greenland. Since the risk will be almost nil, this must be classed as one of the intermediate, palliative measures which most Administration leaders outside the Navy Department prefer to try first, before sending American warships into the combat zones. But the practical effect will also be comparatively slight, according to the naval authorities, who point out that the vast majority of shipping losses occur on the other side of the Atlantic, within a radius of 600 miles from the coast of Britain.

Thus it is difficult to escape the conclusion that the decision to convoy to Greenland is partly political. The intention is pretty obviously to prepare the country's mind for full convoying at a later date.

It should be added that "convoying" may prove to be the wrong word. Both in our Navy Department and at the British Admiralty some officers doubt whether the convoy system is the best answer to the new sea menace of combined air and submarine attack. It is doubly inefficient, these officers feel, because the convoys can only travel at the speed of their slowest ship, and because they provide a conveniently huge mark for the submarine "wolf packs," and for the spotters and bombardiers in the Focke-Wulf Curiers. The substitute proposed is to use naval vessels and long-range aircraft to patrol a trans-Atlantic sea lane, along which all merchant shipping making the crossing could travel without escort in reasonable safety. While this theory will probably not be adopted in toto, a compromise is quite possible. Instead of actually convoying, our Navy could keep a lane to Greenland open. And the convoys could form and proceed from there, thus saving much time for the hard-pressed escorts.

ALTHOUGH PARTIAL convoying is classed as an intermediate or palliative measure, it is interesting that the State Department's requirement of a prior agreement with Britain on the broad terms of partnership will probably be applied to it. Originally, such a prior agreement was only urged if full convoying, regarded as a final acknowledgment of full partnership, were contemplated.

The prior agreement will not, of course, take the form of a secret treaty or unpublished understanding between the State Department and foreign office or the President and Winston Churchill. The risk in everything of that sort would be too great, even if the thing in itself were desirable, which it is not. Instead, if present plans are carried out, Churchill will make a statement to Parliament on war aims and peace methods, to which the President will then assent, or the President will make the statement and the assent will come from Churchill. The main point is that such a statement, bearing the indorsement of both the British and the American leaders, is supposed to be put into the record.

AS WAS REMARKED above, the events in the Mediterranean have given impetus from which the new moves will probably result. And well they might, for the tragedy in the Balkans is the best possible illustration of Britain's need for shipping.

When the Balkan investment was originally decided upon, the plan was to send at least six British divisions into Greece. The men and equipment were ready. It was only necessary to carry them to Greek ports. But transporting a division requires a minimum of 100,000 tons of shipping. The last convoy to pass through Gibraltar to the Eastern Mediterranean was that in which the aircraft carrier Illustrious was so badly bombed by the German air fleet in Sicily. A ship traveling the alternate route around Africa and up through Suez takes four months for the round trip. And in view of the strained state of Britain's shipping resources, it was out of the question to tie up 600,000 tons of shipping for four months.

KINTNER

Thus some troops were borrowed from Egypt and Cyrenaica, where they were still needed, and a few were sent out from Britain and brought up from Australia and New Zealand. But in all, only three divisions could be mustered. When the battle began, including these three divisions, corps troops, base troops and the pilots and ground crews of the R. A. F. the British had not more than 75,000 men in the Balkan peninsula. Because their forces were so few, they had none to spare to send into Yugoslavia, and because no British force was sent into Yugoslavia, liaison failed, with the visible result. It is the sort of result, furthermore, that the shipping shortage will repeatedly produce in the future unless the problem is firmly dealt with.

Steps Short Of Convoy

By Ernest K. Lindley

The President Acts

IN TEN DAYS the President has taken at least six actions of measurable help to the British in meeting their transportation problem. All are steps short of convoying, although one puts the American flag where it might conceivably be shot at.

The first step, ten days ago, was a further increase in our merchant shipbuilding program. It was a small increase—insignificant in comparison with the vast proposals being urged on us by the British, for large new mass-assembly shipyards of the Hog Island type. The British proposals have considerable backing in the Administration, but they are opposed by Admiral Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission. Land insists that further expansion beyond that already charted would only delay the delivery of ships during 1941 and 1942.

Who will win this argument remains, as I write, undecided. But it is encouraging to note in passing that the present program is going ahead at some points with miraculous speed. On Tuesday the first keel will be laid in a new shipyard at Richmond, Va., about 90 days after the first workman moved onto a mud flat to begin building the ways.

The President's second step was the transfer to the British of ten Coast Guard cutters, which are approximately as useful for convoy purposes as the new British corvettes. Small, fast boats, equipped to carry torpedoes or depth charges, or both, also probably have been transferred in some numbers.

The third step was the request for legislative authority to take over the German, Italian and Danish merchant ships in American harbors, already taken into protective custody by the Coast Guard. If these ships do not go promptly into British hands, they will at least permit the transfer of equivalent tonnage now under the American flag.

DEVELOPMENT No. 4 was the arrival of the first British ship, or ships, for repair in our shipyards, under the Lend-Lease Act. How many of these are here now, how many may come later, when they arrive and leave—all such information is supposed not to be published. The Secretary of the Navy has so requested, and the press generally is cooperating. Use of American naval yards will expedite the repair of British war and merchant vessels and keep them at a safe distance from German bombers while the repairs are made. In the aggregate this form of aid may be the equivalent of many new ships.

Action No. 5 was the formal establishment of an American protectorate over Greenland. American patrol and supply ships and Army garrisons will soon be on their way to lower Greenland, if, indeed, they have not already started. The protectorate over Greenland may serve four purposes, at least three of which will be helpful to the British.

The first purpose is purely defensive to safeguard the northeastern flank of the Western Hemisphere.

The second is to lay out airfields which may be used during the summer months in flying airplanes to Great Britain. Larger craft can make the flight nonstop from Newfoundland to England. For craft of shorter range stepping stones are conveniently at hand in the route Newfoundland-Greenland-Iceland-Great Britain. If all planes for use in England are flown across, the relief to British shipping will be considerable. And larger craft, by using the stepping stones, can carry no small amount of emergency cargo. Bombers now being flown directly from Newfoundland are carrying aluminum parts and other light material needed in a hurry.

Thirdly, Greenland ports may be used to some extent for the transfer of cargoes to British ships. American ships can go to Greenland harbors. There the British can take over for the run into the British Isles.

FOURTHLY, Greenland provides patrol ships and plane bases for use if we extend the so-called neutrality belt to mid-Atlantic. In that event we would protect British and other shipping in the western Atlantic as well as our own.

The opening of the Red Sea to American merchant ships is the President's sixth major action in aid to the British. Egypt is technically neutral, and as long as it remains so the President is free to permit American ships to carry all types of cargoes, including munitions, to Egyptian ports and discharge them there.

It would be foolish to deny that there is danger of incidents in the opening of the Red Sea. The Italian menace has been removed, but a German raider is reported to be at large in the Indian Ocean—although it has not chosen to attack American ships going to East African ports. The greatest danger is from German bombing of the Suez Canal, which they are reported to have blocked temporarily on at least one occasion—perhaps others—by the sinking of merchant ships.

The employment of American fast freighters on the long run around Africa will be immensely helpful to the British—even if it does not produce the incident for which the British must hope, to inflame American sentiment for full participation in the war. It will be an interesting test for the Germans: will they risk bringing the United States into the war by continuing to bomb and sow mines in the Suez Canal?

The six actions already taken do not exhaust the steps short of convoying to which the President can resort. Of those remaining, the extension of the neutrality belt to the mid-Atlantic is the most obvious of a major character.

Many people high in the Government—and elsewhere—are convinced that nothing short of the use of our Navy to its full effectiveness will suffice to protect the shipping lanes to the British fronts. The President may be forced to that conclusion. But it cannot be said that he is not first exploring and putting to use less hazardous alternatives.

Tokyo-Moscow Pact

By Barnet Nover

Green Light For New Aggressions

BY SIGNING a neutrality pact with Japan at this time the Moscow government has agreed to play the Axis game in the Far East. In return, Japan has agreed not to stab Russia in the back in the event she becomes embroiled with the Axis, or Axis satellites, in Europe.

NOVER

That, in brief, is the outward meaning of the precious document which Yosuke Matsuoka is bringing home with him from the Soviet capital. He has reason to be pleased. He has scored a ten-strike. His stock had been falling in Tokyo. By no means all Japanese elements have been convinced that Japan should risk everything on the Axis card. The more cautious have been urging a policy of delay, at least until the outcome of the struggle in Europe becomes clear. During recent weeks, while Matsuoka was on a pilgrimage to Axis capitals, this point of view appeared to be making headway in Tokyo.

That trend may now be rapidly reversed. The Russo-Japanese treaty plus the German victories in the Balkans and the successful German-Italian drive across Libya, may persuade Tokyo that the time to act in Southeastern Asia has now arrived. And Matsuoka can be depended upon to give the support of his enhanced prestige to that belief.

THE ONLY major deterrent to a Japanese drive on the Dutch East Indies and Malaya may now be the fear of American reprisals, plus the circumstance that the Japanese army remains bogged down in China.

It is possible that there are unpublished clauses in the Moscow pact which pledge Russia to render no further aid to Chiang Kai-shek in return, perhaps, for an extended Russian sphere of influence in Northwest China. Whether such secret provisions actually exist will soon be determined. The fact that Russia has made a neutrality pact with China's arch enemy will certainly not help the morale of the Chinese, even if dribbles of supplies continue to flow from Russia to Chungking.

Russia has given Japan the green light in Southeastern Asia. She has promised the Japanese that if they become involved in a struggle with Great Britain and the United States she, Russia, will remain neutral. Hitler could not have ordered it better. He has been urging the Japanese for some time to move south.

WHAT PROMPTED Russia to give Japan the green light? There is at this time no danger of a Japanese attack on Siberia or Outer Mongolia. The Japanese have their hands full in China. Whatever hopes they may have entertained in the past of making themselves masters of Siberia from Lake Baikal to the Pacific have had to be abandoned for the present. The immediate value to Russia of the Japanese pledge to respect the "territorial inviolability" of Russia and Russian-held territory is thus precisely nil.

This being so, Russia has not had to worry about the possibility of having to fight simultaneously in Europe and Asia. Even without the pact Russia has not had to fear a Japanese attack upon her rear to coincide with a German aggression against the Ukraine. Even without the pact, Russia could take a bite out of, say, Hungary, whose action in invading Yugoslavia Moscow has denounced, without fear of Japanese reprisals.

The advantages which Russia would seem to derive from the pact, at least so far as the published terms are concerned, do not, therefore, appear to be comparable with those gained by Japan.

THAT MAY be taking a short-sighted view of the situation, however. If Japan gets herself embroiled in Southeastern Asia she will become even less of an immediate threat to the Soviet Union than she has been in the period since she began her costly war with China. Regardless of present treaty stipulations, therefore, Russia would thus be placed in a position to expand her zones of influence and control in China. In other words, she would be able to repeat in Asia the course she took in Europe following the German conquest of Poland, when the eastern part of that nation was incorporated in the Soviet Union, and following the German victory over France, when Russia annexed Bessarabia and northern Bukovina. The Russo-Japanese pact is in this particular the precise counterpart of the Russo-German pact of two years ago. It suits Russia's purpose to encourage Japan to get mixed up in war just as it suited her purpose to have Germany get mixed up in war.

Furthermore, insofar as Moscow's neutrality agreement with Tokyo fits in with Hitler's problem at a time when he is most anxious to keep the United States busy in the Far East so that we won't be able to render all possible aid to Great Britain, the pact may temporarily remove the possibility of a German drive into the Ukraine or across the Dardanelles or both. For this Hitler may well be grateful. The first payment Russia may get out of its betrayal of China may be a respite from the growing German danger and therefore an opportunity to improve her defenses and expand her territorial buffers against the ultimate day of reckoning with the Reich.

McLean Party Makes It A Truly Capital Easter

By Elizabeth Hennev

Easter gave its promise of Peace to the World yesterday as it dawned with a choir of birds in the suddenly warm spring air, and shed a radiance of brilliant sunshine over the unfolding flowers of the Capital. Thousands of Washingtonians, supplemented by more thousands of visitors, answered the challenge of spring in the bright plumage they wore during the day-long Easter Parade. And since Easter wouldn't be Easter in Washington without a McLean party on the schedule, some two hundred ranking Capitalites wound their way up to Friendship for Mrs. Edward Beale McLean's annual Easter Breakfast.

The hostess received in the flower banked drawing room of the house, wearing a short-sleeved black frock as background for the famous Hope Diamond, and a large black picture hat.

Most of the guests, soon after their arrival, wandered through the drawing room and out onto the terrace, where the forsythia rioted in golden blossoms as far as one could see. There canapes and cocktails were served until the party moved on to the dining room and inclosed porch, where the tables had been set.

The dining tables themselves were centered by enormous bowls of spring blossoms, surrounded by pink and yellow toy bunny souvenirs; and many a smart costume could have been described as "accented by a bunny rabbit," as the guest left with a souvenir tucked under one arm. For the first time in the memory of guests who had attended many of these affairs, the Easter party was photographed, with a photographer flashing bulbs here and there during the event.

Envoys and Members Of Cabinet Present

Among the official guests present were the Finnish Minister and Mme. Procope, the latter in a chic costume of black; the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos, she wearing a black suit accented with an ecru, frilly blouse; the Danish Minister and Mme. de Kauffmann; Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the latter wearing a brown print frock; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones, she in a black suit accented by a cluster of yellow orchids and topping the outfit with a hat fashioned of clusters of fruit; and the Governor of New Jersey and Mrs. Charles Edison, she accenting her dark gown with a lingerie collar and a bit of ribbon of parma violet shade.

Mrs. Vandenberg Wears Red Blouse

Also in the official group were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Vandenberg looking like a perky Oriole with a bright red blouse accenting her dark suit; Senator Joseph Guffey and his sister, Miss Pauletta Guffey, she wearing a smart black and pink print; Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, the latter in a chic flowered outfit; Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley; Senator and Mrs. Robert O. Taft; Senator Theodore Francis Green; Senator Arthur Capper; Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom (she wearing black crepe accented with an aqua hat), accompanied by their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, who matched her beige outfit with her hat and accessories.

Former Senator Henry F. Ashhurst was a member of the party as were the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, she topping her costume with a bright, flowered hat.

Other Notables Glimpsed in Crowd

Still other notables attending were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, the Judge Advocate General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion; Gen. and Mrs. Russell Maxwell, the former Attorney General, Homer Cummings; Sir Gerald and Lady Campbell, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Alice Longworth, Miss Harriet Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Maj. and Mrs. Ernest Brown, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. George Holmes, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt and Mr. and Mrs. George Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Cartier came down from New York, as did Lucius Beebe and Hal Phyfe, and from Baltimore came Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Martin and Dr. Esther Richards.

Still others there were Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, J. Edgar Hoover, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, Dr. and Mrs. Winifred Overholzer, Jerome Zerbe, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. John L. Lewis and John L. Lewis, jr., Miss Mary Sheridan and many more.

Blairs Fete Daughter

Judge and Mrs. Harry W. Blair entertained yesterday afternoon at their home in Alexandria in honor of their daughter, Mrs. M. M. Forsythe, who with her three children has come from her home in Detroit, Mich., for a few weeks' visit here.

It was an "after five" party and Mrs. Blair received with her daughter at the entrance to the drawing room. She was gowned in a figured crepe dress with a necklace of antique silver.

Mrs. Blair Bannister, who has known Mrs. Forsythe since she was a child, was among the early arrivals at the party, and was smartly turned out in a black frock dotted with white, topped by a broad-brimmed black hat edged with a narrow band of white.

Mrs. Charles Beatty Moore dropped in, as did Mrs. Meredith Page Wickens, Mr. and Mrs. Newell Blair and Mrs. Thomas Armat, accompanied by her son, Brooke, who later went on to the Walter Tuckermans.

The Tuckermans' daughter, by the way, Miss Margaret Cary Tuckerman, left last evening following her Easter vacation, to go back to Bryn Mawr oCllege. Still another daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman, Mrs. Robert Hugh Williams, has just arived with her husband in San Diego, where Capt. Williams is attached to the Marine parachute base there. They were until recently stationed in Lakewood, N. J.

Engagements Announced Today

Hessler Studio—J. Sterling Getchell.

Miss Marie Jorolemon (above), whose engagement to Robert VanDenbergh, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert VanDenbergh, of Norfolk, Va., is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy J. Jorolemon, of Chevy Chase. In circle, Miss Ruth de Windt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delano de Windt, of Great Barrington, Mass., who announce her engagement to Archibald Robinson Hoxton, jr., of Alexandria, Va.

Engaged Pair Widely Feted

The prenuptial whirl of parties in honor of Miss Stellita Stapleton and her fiance, George Renchard, continues with ever increasing speed, and not less than two parties a day seems to be the quota for the popular young couple whose wedding will take place on Saturday at St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Yesterday's parties included a cocktail party at the Patrick J. Hurley's, followed by a buffet supper, given by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Merrill in their Wesley Heights home.

The afternoon party was of double significance, for it was also a farewell to Washington for the Hurleys. They are giving up their Georgetown home and will move tomorrow to their country estate, Belmont, near Leesburg, Va. Yesterday Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn (the former Miss Patricia Hurley, and in reality hostess for the occasion) received with her mother at the door of the drawing room. She wore a dark blue street length frock with a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Hurley was also in dark blue.

About seventy-five guests dropped in during the twilight hours, among them the members of the wedding party, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Belin, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr. (the former Peggy Townsend), Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson, Miss Dolly Corbin and Samuel Biddle.

The Vandenbergs Entertain at Tea For Daughter

Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg entertained yesterday afternoon at a tea in honor of their daughter, Mrs. John Bailey, jr., who is here for the Easter holidays from her home in Detroit.

Mrs. Vandenberg was gowned in navy blue and white organza for the occasion, while Mrs. Bailey (the former Miss Barbara Vandenberg) wore a gown of aqua blue crepe.

The dining room was festive with all-white Easter decorations. Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. Merle Thorpe and Mrs. William P. MacCracken.

Mrs. Vandenberg will entertain at tea again this afternoon in honor of the Michigan group of delegates to the D. A. R. Congress.

Admiral, Mrs. Land To Give Reception

Rear Admiral Emory Scott Land, of the Maritime Commission, and Mrs. Land have issued invitations for a reception tomorrow afternoon from 5 to 7 at the Army-Navy Club.

The fete has been arranged in celebration of the fourth birthday of the Maritime Commission.

Miss de Windt Plights Troth

Of wide interest in Washington is the announcement made today in Great Barrington, Mass., by Mr. and Mrs. Delano de Windt, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth de Windt, to Archibald Robinson Hoxton, jr., of Alexandria, Va.

Miss de Windt, sixth generation granddaughter of President John Adams, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heyliger Adams de Windt, of Winnetka, Ill., and of Mr. and Mrs. John H. C. Church of Great Barrington, Mass., was graduated from the Barrington School for Girls, the Garland School of Boston, and the Katharine Gibbs of New York.

D. A. R. to Honor Ala. Daughters

The annual dinner honoring the Alabama Daughters of the American Revolution and Mrs. E. R. Barnes, a candidate for vice president general, will be given in the North Room at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, all national officers and Miss Camille Wright, the Good Citizenship Pilgrim from Tuscaloosa, Ala., will be guests.

Social Events Blossom Forth With Easter

Spring came round the corner Easter morning and brought with it a sudden energy among the different branches of social Washington. Service circles, which had curtailed their activities during the lenten period, have begun to plan parties again.

The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark, and Mrs. Stark will entertain at dinner on Wednesday evening in honor of the former Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb have issued invitations for dinners on the evening of April 29 and 30. On May 12, Mrs. Holcomb will be off to the Portsmouth Navy Yard in New Hampshire, where she will christen the new Navy submarine, the Drum.

Yesterday the Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. George C. Marshall took a small party for an Easter picnic luncheon down to the new home they bought last week near Leesburg. In the party were Mrs. Marshall's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Tupper Brown, from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and her other son, Clifton Stevenson Brown, from New York City.

The new home, by the way, called Dodona Manor, is an historic Colonial mansion built by George Washington Ball. Tall, with white pillars and surrounded by enormous trees, it has just been all modernized and redecorated and Mrs. Marshall expects to haunt all the auction sales and antique shops in the surrounding countryside to furnish it. It is only 45 minutes by car from Washington and Gen. and Mrs. Marshall expect to spend every possible weekend there.

D. A. C. Meets Here April 19

Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, District State Regent, of the Daughters of the American Colonists has received the call for the twentieth general assembly of the national society, which will be held at the Hotel Mayflower, April 19-21, with the national president, Mrs. Charles Doublas MacCarthy, of Maplewood, N. J. presiding.

Childern of the American Colonists will hold a tree planting at Mount Vernon on Sunday, April 20 at 10:30 a. m. with Miss Carolina V. Sudler, in charge.

The Colonists have planned to serve tea for all visiting members on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 4 to 6 p. m., in suite 256 of the Mayflower. Mrs. Joseph S. Chafee, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Sol Lansburgh. Registration will be Saturday from 1:30 to 5 p. m., in the Seventeenth Street parlor and on Monday, from 8:30 to noon. The national executive board will meet Saturday, at 2 p. m. Miss Mary C. Cursler is general chairman of the general assembly, the opening business session of which will be at 9:45 Monday, in the Chinese Room. William Tyler Page will lead in the American's Creed. A memorial service for deceased members will be held at 12 o'clock Monday, with Mrs. Loren Rex in charge. In the afternoon, new State regents, vice regents, and chapter regents will be confirmed.

During the two decades the National Society has erected 11 national memorials and the chapters have placed more than 100 markers and tablets in local historic spots. A year book is issued each year and five volumes of colonial lineage books have been published. Medals of honor for awards are now available in bronze and gold.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

A WEEK OF PARTIES in honor of Stellita Stapleton and George Renshard was inaugurated by the cocktail party given in honor of the popular couple by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowlton and the pretty Corbin sisters. The party took place on Easter Saturday at the Corbins' house on Wyoming Avenue, where guests assembled in the attractive Mexican bar and wandered out into the flower-decked patio.

The bride-to-be was charming in a black and red print worn with a black hat. She was full of enthusiasm for the lovely wedding presents which arrive every day at the Stapleton house on Massachusetts Avenue. She knows just which friend sent each one.

Mrs. Knowlton, in a spring print and wearing her hair in a new arrangement, a long bob with bangs, received the guests while Dolly and Edythe Corbin saw that everyone had a favorite mixture from the bar. Dolly wore a pale blue frock with collar and cuffs of white organdy and Edythe had chosen a dark green frock with a white blouse resembling a peasant costume.

IN KEEPING with the decorations in the bar was the Mexican singer in native costume who wandered about among the guests singing to his own guitar accompaniment. In spite of his authentic Mexican background, the singer is a naturalized American and is going off to do his military service next month.

Among thos dropping in to drink a toast to the soon-to-be bride and groom were Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Baron and Baroness Baeyens, Senor and Senora de Echegaray, Mme. Lucet and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr. Also present were the Wright sisters, Edith and Mary; Kitty DuBois, Eleanor Meem, Jane Culbertson, Marie vom Rath, and Estherbelle McHarg. Also Ned McLean, Jock Merriam, Samuel Biddle, Judson Bolles, Smith Bowman, John Magruder, Billy Mitchell and a number of others.

ROBERT PELL and Alfred Wagg, of the State Department were joint hosts the other afternoon at a stag cocktail party at Mr. Wagg's apartment on Massachusetts Avenue. Guests of honor were two State Department bachelors, who have recently been assigned posts at the United States Embassy in London. Jake Beam will leave for London shortly with Bob Coe following toward the middle of the summer.

Also being congratulated that day was Paul Culbertson but for a quite different reason. It was his birthday and several other guests had sent him singing telegrams which were supposed to be delivered to Mr. Culbertson at the party. However Mr. Culbertson fooled them by going home before the telegrams were delivered. Other guests from the State Department were Loy Henderson, Eric Wendelin, Robert Stewart and Edward Page.

An attractive visitor at the Snowden Fahnestocks' is Mr. Fahnestock's daughter, Fontaine, who made her debut in the Capital a few springs ago. Now dark-eyed Fontaine is engaged to Warwick Stabler, who is assigned to Washington temporarily for military training so the time is perfect for a family reunion.

ANOTHER FAMILY reunion took place when Mrs. Robert T. Pell managed to get places on the Bermuda Clipper for herself and little daughter, and arrived in Washington yesterday morning to spend Easter with her husband. Mrs. Pell has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Reginald Barker, in Bermuda and found it difficult to obtain return accommodations.

At a small gathering not long ago a foreign diplomat with a worried look drew me aside and said, "I want to ask advice." Beaming with pride, I was all attention. "What," he said, "is the difference between 'gosh' and 'nuts' and when does one use those words?"

Miss Sheppard's Troth Is Made Known at Tea.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Sheppard, of Salisbury, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Alice, to Charles H. Burton, son of Mrs. Bessie R. Burton. The news was made known at a tea given yesterday by Mrs. Burton and Mrs. Leslie A. Lyles at the former's home in Chevy Chase. About 300 attended. Musical selections were played by Miss Judy Conklin and Stanley A. Lyles.

The prospective bride attended Salisbury State College in Maryland and the bridegroom studied at George Washington University and the Washington College of Law. He is a member of Sigma Chi and Sigma Nu Phi.

Mrs. T. J. Kennedy Visiting Gerows

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. L. T. Gerow, of 1870 Wyoming Avenue, have as their house guest Mrs. T. J. Kennedy, of St. Paul, Minn., sister of Mrs. Gerow.

Mrs. Kennedy is the State corresponding secretary of the Minnesota D. A. R. and a member of the Mendota Chapter. She is in Washington to attend the D. A. R. convention this week.

74th Club Party Planned in Honor Of Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt will be guest of honor Wednesday at a luncheon being given by the Seventy-fourth Club at the Carlton Hotel.

Mrs. Charles Halleck, of Indiana, president of the club, is being assisted in making arrangements for the affair by Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, of Kentucky, former president; Mrs. John J. Dempsey, of New Mexico, wife of the maritime commissioner, and Mrs. Herron Pearson, of Tennessee.

Officers who will receive with Mrs. Halleck include Mrs. W. Sterling Cole, of New York; Mrs. Joseph Casey, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Frank Carlson and Mrs. John Houston, of Kansas, and Mrs. John Tolan, of California.

Tea to Be Given By Mrs. Harllee

Mrs. William C. Harllee will entertain this afternoon at a tea from 4 to 6 o'clock in honor of the Texas delegates to the D. A. R. convention.

Assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Luther Johnson, Mrs. Albert Thomas, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Mrs. Fred Rogers and Mrs. Lemuel Bolles.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MR. AND MRS. Carl Henry James Becker, of Gainesburg, Va., gave a delightful Easter party yesterday afternoon in honor of their daughter, Miss Doris Higginbotham Becker, and John Paul Pero 3d, of New York City and Long Island, whose engagement was announced yesterday. Friends of the family were asked from 5 to 7, but it was at a much later hour before everyone left. The lovely home of the Beckers was decorated throughout with Easter lilies and green ferns.

Miss Becker, wearing a dinner gown of pale yellow and gray chiffon, which was so becoming to her exquisite complexion and red hair, received with her mother in the long drawing room. Mrs. Becker wore a costume of white and gray linen with a girdle of yellow. Refreshments were served from the dining room and toasts were given the young couple as trays of champagne were passed about the lower floor of the house.

AMONG THE guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Pero, jr., of Long Island, parents of the bridegroom-to-be, and his two sisters, Miss Mary Pero and Miss Clare Pero, and a cousin of Miss Becker, Miss Joyce Albright, of Detroit, who came here for the party.

Others included Mr. and Mrs. Moore Moore, of Charleston, S. C.; Mrs. Albert Cage, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Allen Krebs, of Washington; Miss Nancy Hoskinson, James O'Grady, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Royal Moulton, also of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rathbone Smith, of Alexandria; Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin D. Spillman, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dorman, Mrs. B. Day Spilman, Mrs. Richard Barrett, Miss Anne Camden Barrett and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Charrington.

THE NEWS that Gen. and Mrs. George C. Marshall—(he is Chief of Staff of the United States Army)—have purchased a lovely old place in Leesburg is of great interest to every one in the "hunt country." Gen. Marshall has bought the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. Northcutt Ely, on the Washington Pike, which fronts on both Route 7 and the Edwards Ferry Road.

MIDDLEBURG is still gay with visitors who came for the Middleburg Hunt Race meeting on Saturday (the best ever held here) in the twenty-first running of the famous Middleburg Cup Steeplechase. The weather was ideal, all six races well filled, and crowds of smartly dressed people from all parts of the United States came here for the event.

Mr. William F Hitt entertained at his home near Middleburg and in his box at the races were his niece, Mrs. Andor de Hertelendy, of Washington, and Miss Adele Raynal, of New York. Every household in the neighborhood was overflowing with out-of-town guests. Teas, cocktail nad dinner parties were given before the gala hunt ball in the auditorium in the village, which started at 11 p. m. The beautifully gowned women, and men wearing "evening pink" were being snapped all evening by a Life photographer.

MISS ELEANOR FLOOD and her cousin, Miss Margaret Byrd, were seen at a table with a party of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Blaze de Sibour attended a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young and came on to the ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ward, jr., just back from Nassau, were at a table with Mr. and Mrs. James McCormick, just returned from their wedding trip to Nassau, and Miss Mildred McConnell and Russell Ketchum, of Wilmington.

Others entertaining friends at tables which lined the walls of the ballroom included Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Langley, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Read, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, Mr. and Mrs. John Butler, Mr. and Mrs. John Rawlings, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hill Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, Miss Jane Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Harrison—he rode two winning horses on Saturday; the Misses Mary Owen Lyon and Betty Lyon, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Whitney, Mrs. Peter B. Blood, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Holmes Morison, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Daly, of Connecticut (his horse, Mansfield Park, won the big race of the day, the Middleburg Cup), and Christopher Greer, whose horse, Goldun won the Raymont Belmont Memorial Steeplechase—ridden by John Bosley, jr., of Baltimore in the most exciting race ever run in Virginia.

MR. AND MRS. Thomas Claggett, of Washington (she was formerly Miss Nancy Leiter), are spending the Easter holidays at Hot Springs, Va., and are expected to return to their home by Leesurg this week to visit his grandmother, Mrs. S. S. Lutz, at her home near town.

Samuel Lutz Alexander and his fiance, Miss Margaret Wallace, of Fredericksburg, are the guests for Easter of his parents, Judge and Mrs. J. R. H. Alexander, near Leesburg. Mr. Alexander and Miss Wallace attended the Middleburg races on Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. James M. Ball, of Richmond, are in Middleburg for a visit. They were seen at the races with her sister, Miss Charlotte H. Noland.

TIM McCOY, of movie and circus fame, who often visits in the Warrenton neighborhood where he has many friends, has recently purchased a farm out near the Warrenton Springs Road. He will soon take possession of the land and plans to make his home in Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood Vermillion, of Washington, and their fascinating little daughter, "Fene," are the guests for Easter of her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. David Campbell Mayers, at The Rectory, in Middleburg. The Vermillions will return to their home today. Mr. and Mrs. D. Alex Mayers, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and their son, Alex., jr., are also the Easter guests of their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Mayers.

MISS ANNE Bullitt was entertaining a party of Foxcroft girls in her box at the Middleburg races on Saturday. A vested choir of Foxcroft girls sang in Emmanuel Episcopal Church yesterday morning.

Famous Siren Inspires New Evening Fashions

With romance a leading motif of the spring style scene, designers have turned for inspiration to a noted eighteenth century captivator of men's hearts. Here are two designs for evening glamour from the new collection of Lady Hamilton fashions—a white crepe gown featuring Grecian drapery, and a cape whose sweeping lines have all the dash and elegance of the courtly days when Emma Hamilton's beauty was the talk of London.

These romantic designs have practical value for Washington women preparing for the spring social, or "Little" season. The dress, whose bodice and detachable scarf are trimmed with white beaded embroidery, takes on a dinner gown air when the scarf is draped about the shoulders. But without the scarf, or with it worn as a mantilla, the dress becomes more formal. The cape, made of velvet-soft Hockanum duvetyne, may be worn over bouffant evening gowns for the round of spring proms and gala balls. Both gown and cape capture the spirit of eighteenth century elegance and interpret it in a practical way. Both can be worn in any season and for a variety of events, but are at their best for "grand" occasions.

Housework Won't Beautify Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU are the average homemaker, you may be surprised to learn that in a year you wash about an acre of dishes and hang out perhaps 3 miles of clothes—and still you have a waistline that is around 4 inches too large.

Statistics don't lie and housework is work. But the muscles mainly used for it are the small ones of the hands and feet, arms and legs, which burn comparatively few calories.

Laundry work is usually the big job of the week, but to lose half a pound of weight washing clothes you would have to put in a 14-hour day. To lose just one-fourth pound ironing, you would have to keep at it for eight hours straight. And if you ate a good meal during either of those long stretches, you probably wouldn't lose an ounce.

The endless repetition of small tasks overworks certain muscles and doesn't affect others enough to keep them in tone. This being the case, housework cannot possibly take the place of a streamlining daily dozen—and I take issue with the theory that it can.

Uneven Exercise

You will tire less easily as well as have a better figure for a regular set of exercises directed to the trunk muscles. But that is something you will not be able to fully appreciate until after you have given the exercises a fair trial. Probably the first step, then, is to figure out ways of saving your energy at housework so you will have some to spare for calisthenics.

It is an unnecessary waste of energy to stoop over or stretch up while working. The height of most working surfaces ranges from 32 to 36 inches, and you may have to make some adjustments before the kitchen table, ironing board and sink are the proper height for you. The use of casters or blocks may solve the problem of making the table high enough. If it is too high it is easy enough to have the legs sawed off an inch or so.

Set When Possible

In standing to work, it is less fatiguing to maintain erect posture and to do the necessary bending at the hips. But, whenever possible, sit down to work—sitting takes 8 per cent less energy than standing. You can always sit to peel the vegetables, and you can make use of your high kitchen chair while ironing or washing dishes. This may seem awkward to you at first, but you will find it a big energy saver.

In dusting low pieces of furniture or picking up things from the floor save your back by using your knee joints. Have one foot forward, keep the spine straight, and flex the knees. That is much less tiring than standing stiff-legged and stooping over.

For housework have shoes with a good pair of heels, not too high. Run over heels or badly fitting shoes will not only tire you out, but they take toll of nerves and disposition.

Changing the Furniture

EPISODE I

He—Say, what's happened here?

She—What do you mean?

He—Where IS everything?

She—It's all here. I've just been changing things around a little. It makes the room look so much larger this way.

He—Of all the —I Say, where's all the chairs?

She—There's your chair over in that other corner. You see you get so much more light that way.

He—I can't sit THERE! Besides I can't see by that lamp.

She—It's a better lamp than the one you were sitting by. That's one reason I moved your chair.

He—That's no place for a chair. Why you always want to be upsetting things I can't see. Where's the radio?

She—It's right at your elbow. Now before you had to get up.

He—That's too close. I don't want that thing blaring in my ear. It looks like you could at least have let the radio alone.

She—But you were always saying it was in the wrong place.

He—Well I can't see any point in always upsetting things. What's the couch doing over there?

She—It really fits in there better and then it gives us more space.

He—It looked a lot better where it was. Now it's in everybody's way.

She—Well Daisy Lightcap and everybody think it looks a lot better this way.

He — Daisy Lightcap's always poking her nose into other people's business.

She—Daisy's perfectly wonderful about furniture. Everybody says she ought to be an interior decorator.

He—I don't want any of these fool decorators butting in. All I want is comfort. Say, what's the idea of putting that table over in that corner?

She—Well Daisy says—I mean everybody says it balances the room better—no, what I mean is it's more convenient.

He—More convenient! Now if I want anything on the table I have to get up and walk clear over there.

She—Well before, you had to walk to the other corner. Besides the table belongs in that grouping.

He—Grouping! Who cares anything about grouping? All I want is to be able to find things when I want 'em. . . . Say, what went with that picture?

She—What picture?

He—The one of the fox hunt.

She—Oh, I took that out. Daisy said—I mean the walls were really too cluttered. And besides it did not fit into the decor—I mean it really looked better upstairs in the bedroom.

He—You don't mean you've been changing everything upstairs too?

She—We-l-l just a little.

She—What?

He—Well, if you've got to keep upsetting things all the time, I wish you'd just let me have one chair in one place that you'd let alone and that would always be there so I could be sure of there being just one place in this house that I could have a little peace.

She—All right.

EPISODE II

He—You know what you ought to do in this kitchen?

She—What?

He—Have that work table put on the other side of the stove.

She—But this is the place it's supposed to be in all kitchens.

He—Just the same, you'd save a lot of steps if it was on the other side. And another thing, you ought to have those shelves put on that other wall.

She—But they don't make kitchens that way.

He—Listen, I'm telling you how to save steps. I'm looking at this thing mathematically.

She—But the man who sold us this house said this was the latest thing in kitchens.

He—I don't care what he said. It's all wrong. The whole thing ought to be changed so you could systematize your work. Now the whole trouble with women is—

She—But, of course, I'm used to it this way.

He—That's just the way with women. They get in a rut and stay there. Now if I had to work in this kitchen I'd tear the whole thing up and change everything!

Mary Haworth's Mail

For Almost a Year, Girl Has Been Weighing Man's Proposal of Marriage; Depressed by Her Inability To Reach a Decision, She Asks Disinterested View

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About a year ago I came to Washington (against my parents' wishes) to take a Government job. My work is pleasant and I have made many friends. After four months' pleasant office association, one young man started dating me regularly and in a short while told me he was falling in love with me. He said if I did not return the feeling, he would get a job somewhere else and try to forget me.

I was greatly surprised and also flattered by his statement, and while I was secretly convinced, at the time, that I never would want to marry him, I told him it was too soon for me to give a direct answer to his question; that I didn't know yet how I felt. We continued seeing each other frequently, and each time he returned to the question of love and marriage, I gave the same answer: "I seem to like you, but I don't think I will ever marry you." That was the way I felt, but I didn't seem to have enough strength of character to break off completely.

I started analyzing my feelings and came to the conclusion that I might be in love with him, but failing to realize it because he did not measure up to certain standards I had in my mind for my husband-to-be. He wasn't as rich, as brilliant or as handsome as the man I had hoped to marry. However, recognizing his qualities of sincerity, kindliness, humor, etc.,—qualities which I admire greatly,—I began to reproach myself for being small and petty, looking for some man to marry who was far above me.

Having reached this conclusion, I continued to go out with him, secretly hoping at times that my noncommittal attitude would kill his interest, thus relieving me of responsibility for making a negative decision that I might later regret. This has gone on for eight months, and I am as indecisive as ever. I have tried to be frank with him—with one exception: I haven't told him that my parents disapprove of him. He has visited in their home several times and they say he doesn't show enough "promise;" that he will always remain in the "Government clerk" classification, and that his wife probably would have to "work forever."

Also, they feel that I have been attracted to him by loneliness, and never would have given him serious consideration if I had met him at home. They want me to get a transfer back home, where matrimonial prospects would be more plentiful, due to their social standing in the community. Their attitude has made me feel belligerent toward them, and has driven me closer to the boy, who is a rather independent person.

There is another angle to my confusion. I lack confidence in my judgment. For instance, I like to have the opinions of others when I select clothes, and am usually dissatisfied with my choice, unless others compliment my taste. Thus, I wonder if my inability to imagine myself married to this boy is largely due to the fact that my friends and relatives never remark that he is superior or outstanding.

I also wonder if I have always wanted to marry an outstanding man in order to compensate for my own feeling of inferiority. I feel envious of friends (less intelligent than I) who have married highly educated and successful men, and I fear that marriage to an "average" man would add to my feeling of inferiority. Then again, I tell myself I may be looking for something that doesn't exist, and that many of these so-called successful men might not be attractive to me.

This boy told me recently that because of the way I act in his company, encouraging his attentions, he has believed from the first that I am in love with him. Were it not for this conviction, he would have given me up long ago, he said. I must reach some decision soon, as things cannot go on this way indefinitely. The situation has me depressed, since I am always weighing it, pro and con. Your comments will be greatly appreciated. Sincerely,

ELEANOR S.

Girl's Neutral Attitude Tells Lack of Love

DEAR ELEANOR S.: It is my opinion that you are not in love with the young man; but only, as your parents shrewdly surmise, grateful for his devotion, in the absence of other suitors; and rather lazily dependent upon his attentions, for the reason that they give you a ready-made, routine social program for weekends, holidays, etc. You speak of having continued to go out with him in the secret hope that he might lose interest as a result of your noncommittal attitude; but what you fail to mention, I daresay, is the further secret hope that, in making the rounds with him, you might meet some other fellow who would be equally attracted and a closer approximation of your heart's desire.

As someone has astutely observed, when a man wonders if he is in love he is, but when a woman loses sleep over the same question, she isn't. Your intuition gave you the essentially truthful answer to the boy's proposal, the instant he made it. Your first, involuntary feeling-reaction was, "I never would want to marry HIM." The voice of your heart speaking told you, plainly, "This is NOT the man for me."

The fact that you have since learned to know and appreciate his many amiable and excellent qualities; have come to believe that he would make some woman a good husband, doesn't alter the validity, for you, of that sudden, sharp conviction that he was not designed to be your mate. Indeed, the fact that you can appraise him favorably, without experiencing a glow of tender pride and satisfaction in that estimate, must be construed as evidence that he, as a personality, "leaves you cold."

It seems to me that, far from being in love with him and failing to realize it, you are hopelessly neutral in your emotional attitude toward him. I think you have been trying to sell yourself on the proposition of his desirability and finding that the sale just won't stick. No doubt you would like to be married, and probably came to Washington with the idea of "meeting your Fate" here. So far, this man is the only local suitor you have been able to attract, and although you know very well he isn't what you were looking or hoping for, you are loathe to turn him loose,—because, after all, he is a bird-in-hand and you see none other in the immediate bush.

Stop wrestling with the hypothetical question of whether you love him enough to warrant marriage. Face the fact that you don't love him at all; that his chief value to you is (and has been) that of dependable squire and trusted confidante in a city where men friends are not so easily come by; and then ask yourself the real question confronting you (the one you have been trying to evade), namely: Have I the courage to tell him the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and let him go out of my life entirely, supposing that is what he decides he should do?

Frankly, I think you would be better off shifting for yourself, socially, than in making the headache-y compromise to which you are currently committed. As has been said, "When the half-gods go, the gods arrive." If left entirely beau-less for a time, you would undoubtedly exert yourself—as you are not doing now—to enlarge your list of activities and acquaintances, thus paving the way to meeting a man you could love wholeheartedly. Little Original Duncan Phyfe Furniture Remains

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

AMERICANS have good reason to be proud of Duncan Phyfe, even though he was a Scotchman born. For he came to this country when he was 16 (in 1784) and learned his trade of cabinet-making in Albany, where his father settled. But like many another ambitious young man with ideas about a career, he moved on to New York City to seek his fortune. He never made the fortune, but he did achieve fame. His modest shop on Broad Street brought the great and the rich to its door as news of the lovely furniture he made spread among fashionables of the day.

Mahogany was the wood he loved best and many a tale is told of the affectionate care he lavished upon the preparation of the wood he used for his furniture. So exacting was he that the mahogany men in the West Indies put aside their best logs for Phyfe's shop.

Inevitably Phyfe's work was influenced by the English styles of the time, particularly by such masters as Sheraton and Adam and Chippendale, just as they in turn had been influenced by the designs of French, Greek, Roman and Chinese origins and whatever other sources they were exposed to. But like them, Duncan Phyfe made everything he touched peculiarly his own.

Although Phyfe made a great deal of furniture, at one time employing a hundred men in his shop, little remains today that can be positively identified with him. But our manufacturers, appreciating the beauty of his models, have succeeded in making many fine reproductions at prices that bring these lovely furniture designs within the reach of those in modern circumstances.

Monogram Linens.

Anne Shirley has a passion for monograms, loves to have everything from her household linen to her handbags marked with her initials. Most original are the initials on the pocket of the tailored blouse she wears with slacks. Letters are made with rows of tiny white pearl shirtwaist buttons—the kind mother sewed down the front of her finest hand-tucked shirtwaist.

Bill Speeded To Facilitate British Imports

As a new aid-to-Britain move, Administration leaders on the House Ways and Means Committee, it was learned yesterday, have been instructed to get action on the Cullen bill designed to aid importers of certain British commodities, notably woolens, linens and chinaware. The bill would grant relief from the rigid provision of the Tariff Act of 1930, which levies the customs duty on the basis of "foreign value" or the manufacturers' selling price abroad.

The problem grows out of the imposition by Great Britain last October of a so-called purchase tax of 33 1-3 per cent on a list of commodities mainly in order to discourage domestic consumption and stimulate exports to the United States to build up trade balance and dollar exchange here to facilitate the war effort.

The tax is collected from the British manufacturer and, naturally is added to the selling price of his products, with the result that the plan for keeping up the flow of exports to the United States bogged down because the American tariff rates are based on the manufacturer's selling price. This meant what American importers would have to pay duty on the extra one-third added to the cost of articles in Great Britain.

It also meant that the prices these importers would have to charge in the United States would be increased to an extent making it difficult to compete with American goods.

American manufacturers who have built up stocks of wool more or less with the cooperation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are expected to oppose the bill.

British Speed Exports

London, April 13 (AP).—The British garment industry has pooled its resources in an effort to reach new markets in the United States and Canada for British sportswear, woolens and dress fashions to help pay for United States war supplies.

A delegation left over the weekend for New York to open an exhibition of 2,000 models next month. They plan later exhibits at Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities.

A spokesman said the move was not intended to compete with United States manufacturers, who are "supreme in their field," but to offer typically British fashions as collateral for the war financing effort.

Two New Zealand Girls Here To Study American Folk Songs

BETTY AND JOAN RAYNER

Two girls from New Zealand, globe-girding trippers in a trailer, sue research into early American have paused in Washington to purmusic among the collections in the Library of Congress, and to talk with folklore authorities here.

They are the Misses Betty and Joan Rayner, of Auckland. Recognized as authentic scholars in the folklore field, they have conferred with Dr. Harold Spivacke and Alan Lomax of the Library staff; Mrs. Helen Harkness Flanders, Vermont folk archivist, now in Washington, and Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott and Maj. M. J. Pickering of the National Folk Festival Association.

The visit to Washington marks the last lap of their second circuit of the globe in their quest for song origins, and they are amused by the appellation "song sleuths" which has been conferred on them. "So apt and quite American," says Miss Betty. They have done research work in the British Museum, in the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris, in Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia, and Germany.

The Nazi propaganda ministry made the national collections available to them, and hoped they would carry the German folk lieder to other lands, because, he told them, "it made for friendliness among nations."

"This remark was made before the Second World War and it sounds somewhat less than whimsical in the light of today," said Miss Joan.

Since last leaving Europe the young 'song sleuths" have visited Canada, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, and passed several weeks in New England.

They travel in a car with a caravan trailer, equipped for everyday living as well as with file cases and the early instruments of folk minstrels. They learn ballads and folk tunes by word of mouth as well as from the manuscripts of ancient university libraries, from parchment and Black Letter folios and from music in archaic notation.

Speaking of the eighth annual festival to be held in Constitution Hall, May 1, 2 and 3, under the sponsorship of The Washington Post Folk Festival Association, the Misses Rayner regard it as one of the most significant educational and cultural events they have encountered in America.

"The tremenduous diversity of American folk music, greater perhaps than that of any other nation in the world, is a source of constant amazement to us,' Miss Betty said. "Much of it derives from England, Scotland and Ireland, which is understandable enough, but all the world has contributed, even the Orient. In Vermont we heard an ancient song, "The Factor's Song,' which derives from an ancient Persian legend. It had 47 verses when your forefathers sang it in England."

The Misses Rayner will depart late in April for New Mexico for a study of songs of Spanish derivation.

Wallace to Speak As D. C. Observes Pan-American Day

Washington's part in the Nationwide celebration of Pan American Day will be launched today with an address by Vice President Wallace at a luncheon at the Pan American Union. The luncheon will honor Ambassadors, ministers and charges d'affaire of Latin American countries.

The celebration here will end with a concert of Latin American music at the Pan American Union by the United States Navy Band under Lieut. Charles Benter. Guest artists will be Lila Cerda, Chilean soprano, and Angelo Reyes, the program to be carried by the National Broadcasting Co., from 9 to 9:30 p. m.

From 6 to 6:15 p. m., Edwin C. Hill, news commentator, will broadcast a talk on inter-American travel over the Columbia network from the governing board room of the Pan American Union.

Oratorical Contest Trials Tomorrow

Preliminary trials in the Junior Oratorical Contest will be conducted at the Eastern Branch, Boys' Club of Washington, Seventeenth and Massachusetts Avenue Southeast, tomorrow at 8 p. m. The trials will be under auspices of the Boys' Club, the Optimist Club of Washington and the National Capital Optimist Club.

Two finalists among 15 boy members of the Junior Optimist Club of the Boys' Club will represent the two senior clubs in the Sixteenth District of Optimist International competition at the Mayflower Hotel May 10. Boys from eight Southern cities will compete, the winner to go to the Optimist international convention at Minneapolis in July.

Howard U. to Open Study on Powder

Registration for a free course in "Chemistry of Powder and Explosives" will begin tomorrow at Howard University, L. K. Downing, dean of the school of architecture and engineering, said yesterday.

Under direction of the United States Office of Education, the course is designed to provide training in the chemistry of explosives for persons needed in ordnance plants. It will be in two parts, the first concerned with fundamental chemistry, the second with the chemistry of explosives.

Youth Panel Debates Convoys For Britain in Air Forum

Six young people, taking over the American Forum of the Air microphone in the Willard Hotel last night, saw aid-to-Britain convoys on the one hand as essential to stopping totalitarianism, and as instruments for plunging us into war on the other.

First to be introduced by Theodore Granik, moderator, in a discussion entitled "Youth Views the Convoy Question," William P. Bundy, of the Student Defense League, Harvard Chapter, declared we should not only send war goods to England, but convoy them, too.

"I am convinced that active resistance is the only way to prevent the forces of totalitarianism from seizing a country, whether from within or without," Bundy said.

He was followed by Richard A. Moore, chairman, executive committee, College Men for Defense First, who insisted convoys will automatically plunge this country into the war.

"Mr. Roosevelt is playing on the people's sympathy," shouted Miss Fay Bennett, an anticonvoy blonde who is executive secretary of the Youth Committee Against War.

"Mr. Roosevelt's popularity was never greater than it is today," retorted Joseph P. Lash, general secretary of the International Student Service of the United States and a proconvoyite tonight.

Miss Agnes Reynolds, brunette and field secretary of the Student Defenders of Democracy, spoke for convoys.

Tudor Gardiner, jr., a member of the Harvard Committee Against Military Intervention, called the convoy a "macabre" tool of war, warned that it will trap us into a two-ocean war, said Fascism carries the seeds of its own decay.

N. D. Cochran Dies; Retired Editor

Toledo, Ohio, April 13 (AP).—Negley D. Cochran, 77, retired Scripps-Howard newspaper executive, died today after a long illness without knowing that his wife, Nettie, had succumbed Friday following a stroke.

Cochran served as editor of the old News-Bee, a 1-cent tabloid, from 1903 to 1911. More than 20 years ago he was appointed to the editorial board of the Scripps-Howard newspapers and moved to New Rochelle, N. Y., where he resided until a year ago, when he returned to Toledo.

"TO NEGLECT DEFENSE IS TO INVITE DISASTER"
All-American Task
RIGHT in the forefront of the vast defense task that faces the country is the vital need to bring the greatest effort of the greatest number swiftly to bear on the problems at hand.
That this is already happening is clear from a glance into the more than 35 General Motors plants where defense production is the Number One job.
Here you see mobilized the effort not merely of a single organization but of literally hundreds of businesses large and small teaming up smoothly together to provide the speed the program needs.
In the defense production of one GM division, 50 outside machine shops are sharing in the work.
In another, parts are secured from 83 outside suppliers, while raw materials come from 37 other sources.
In still a third case, more than half of the dollar volume represented by existing defense contracts will go to other companies for supplies—companies scattered over seven Middle West states.
Even the GM-developed Allison aircraft engine is built of materials, parts and subassemblies drawn from suppliers in 65 communities scattered from Clarinda, Iowa in the west, to Hartford, Conn. in the east.
This procedure is not strange to anyone familiar with the normal workings of American industry.
It is this breaking up of big jobs into little ones, the spreading of mighty tasks over many shoulders, that is the secret of American efficiency and industrial might.
Certainly the great task of preparing for national defense is not a task delegated merely to a few or undertaken only by a handful. It is a task in which the whole country is already taking part, and one in which the whole country will participate—in steadily enlarging measure.

Prosperity Rounds the Corner

Edgar Vinson, of 2117 Ward Place Northwest, is not a man to permit opportunity to go begging. At Cathedral and Connecticut Avenues yesterday, a new automobile turned the corner and slammed full into the rear of the wrecking truck Vinson was driving. After a few moments of parley, Vinson hooked onto the automobile and towed it to his employer's garage.

Church Comes First

While hundreds of persons yesterday vied for a glimpse of President Roosevelt, one 8-year-old girl concentrated on getting herself to church. As she and a companion passed near St. Thomas' Church, which the Roosevelts attended, the girl declined a suggestion that they stop. "I can't wait to see no President," she said. "I'm late for church now."

Roosevelt May Shelve Rail Review Nominations

It's being whispered in Senate circles that the President will be forced to withdraw his nominations for the Board of Investigation and Review under the Transportation Act of 1940. Wayne Coy, assistant Federal Security Administrator, was nominated for chairman, and Charles West, former Interior and Treasury official, and Nelson Lee Smith of Vermont were proposed for members. The Senate has refused to appropriate funds to set up the new board and it has quietly pigeon-holed the nominations. Southern members are sore because they aren't represented on the board and there have been threats to repeal the law authorizing the board if the President insists on his nominees.

Coy, however, will be taken care of. He is one of the ablest administrators in the Government service. With Budget Director Harold Smith and former Ambassador William Bullitt, Coy has drawn up plans for a home defense agency. The President is expected to create the agency by executive order shortly and Coy undoubtedly will be given a key job in it. Head of the agency is expected to be a "big name."

Shake-up rumors persist at Agriculture. One of the latest is the appointment of Undersecretary Paul Appleby as Forest Service chief. Appleby also is mentioned for the vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board and for governor of Farm Credit if Gov. A. G. Black is appointed to the reserve board. Secretary Wickard and his Undersecretary, it seems, aren't getting on well as they might.

If Appleby is appointed Forest Service chief it will make Interior Secretary Ickes very unhappy. It's an open secret that Ickes wants the Forest Service, and furthermore, that he has suspected Appleby of creating trouble behind the scenes to keep him from getting it. The President is expected to ask Congress to grant him power to reorganize the Government in the interests of National defense almost any day now and when he does the entire Forest Service question will be aired again.

Congress Grows Incautious

At Justice last week several officials were discussing the action of the House in slashing from $550,000 to $200,000 its fund to hire special attorneys.

"I just can't understand it," one of them cracked, "that fund is unemployment insurance for members of Congress and they should be the last ones to reduce it."

Several former members of Congress are paid from the fund and others are trying to land on its payroll. The fund has been used frequently to pay off political debts.

Harry Hopkins, unofficial lend-lease boss, is trying to get offices for his staff at the Federal Reserve building. It was planned originally to house lend-lease employes on Treasury's fourth floor . . . Jack Stone, former Chicago newsman, has been appointed chief of the press section at Treasury's defense bond division . . . It doesn't seem to be generally known, but 1,200 of the estimated 5,500 Federal attorneys already are under Civil Service. Agencies whose lawyers are under merit are ICC, FCC, Veterans Administration, Archives, Federal Security Agency, FDIC, Employes Compensation Commission, and Office of Administrator of Federal Courts.

Hundreds of per annum employes in the War and Navy departments and the Coast Guard would be paid time and a half for overtime under a bill that has the aproval of the Budget Bureau, departments, and the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. The bill limits overtime pay to "field" employes, but workers at the Navy Yard and other War and Navy establishments here are given that classification. The bill is aimed to stop discrimination among employes. For example, architects and engineers, among others, are given overtime pay. An engineer to do his job may require his secretary to work overtime. The engineer gets paid, but the secretary doesn't. The bill would allow the secretary to be paid overtime.

Engineers, architects and other professional employes at the Coast Guard here are required to work two hours overtime daily. They are paid time and a half for the two hours. . . . Wage and Hour has been made a defense agency.

Egg Rolling To Attract 40,000 Youth

South Lawn Gates On White House Grounds to Be Opened at 9 A. M.

The beautiful south lawn at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest will be trampled and tumbled over by an expected 40,000 children today in the annual White House party for egg rollers.

The south lawn gates will open at 9 a. m. for children not more than 12 years of age and their escorts, White House police said yesterday. The gates will be opened to the general public at 3 p. m. until 5 p. m.

The President customarily has appeared for a few minutes on the south portico sometime during the Easter party day and is expected to do so today.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who usually visits among the crowds on the lawn, can't do so, however. She will be on the Pacific Coast at the wedding of her son. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, will act in her stead.

Mrs. Wallace to Entertain

Mrs. Wallace also will entertain British refugee children at a private White House party between 3:30 and 5 p. m. There will be movies, ice cream and cake. Children of high Administration officials also will be among the guests, expected to number about 170.

The party on the lawn will be enlivened by six bands. The United States Marine Band will play from 3 to the closing hour. A Red Cross ambulance and one from Emergency Hospital will be on duty on the grounds all day. Lost children will be looked after by Boy and Girl Scouts.

The visitors are expected, as usual, to leave a mess. The chief groundskeeper, William L. Reeves, said that 40 men from the National Capital Parks office have been assigned to help the six grounds employes of the White House clear away the egg shells and other litter when the party is over.

The bands are from the National Training School, the Alexandria High School, Loew's Theater Band, the Police Boys Club Band, the Montgomery County High School Band and the Marine Band.

Other Parties Planned

Eggs, it appears from all arrangements, will roll down many hills in Washington and vicinity. The Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club and Sidney Lust's theaters will sponsor an egg party, its sixth, to start at 10 a. m. today in Magruder Park, Hyattsville, Md. A crowd of 10,000 is expected by the sponsors.

Nearly 7,000 children accustomed to enjoying their Easter through the eight Community Chest supported settlements won't be overlooked. More than 200 children, from 2 to 5 years old, who attend settlement nursery and kindergarten groups while their mothers are at work, will be overseen at play by the social workers. A group of 40 will go to the Capitol grounds. Children from the Georgetown Children's House will go to the Zoo in a Rotary Club bus tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. Boys of the Eastern and Central branches of the Chest-supported boys club will hold an egg rolling party at 10:45 a. m. today on the flats behind the new National Guard Armory.

Mrs. Pinchot Quits Robeson Concert Group

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot last night resigned from a committee of sponsors for a benefit concert to be presented by Paul Robeson, Negro barytone, at Uline's Arena April 25.

In a statement explaining the action Mrs. Pinchot asserted that a majority of the committee, of which she was chairman, also was withdrawing from sponsoring the recital, offered under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Aid to China and the National Negro Congress.

Mrs. Pinchot said that she had organized the sponsoring committee in the belief that the Aid-China organization would receive all the receipts, and had learned only recently that the National Negro Congress' job drive fund would receive half of the proceeds. She charged that the Committee for Aid to China had made a secret agreement with the Negro Congress as to participation in the concert.

Mortimer Graves, president of the Washington Committee for Aid to China, said last night that Mrs. Pinchot's resignation did not alter plans for the concert. He denied there was secrecy. The two organizations, he said, were to share the ticket proceeds and that all other proceeds, including sale of programs and souvenirs, would go to the China relief fund.

The administrative secretary of the National Negro Congress, George B. Murphy, jr., declared last night that his organization was asked to join in backing the recital after the Aid-China group decided to stage the concert in Uline's, which seats 7,000 persons.

Admirers Fill Hall to Hear Richard Crooks

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Richard Crooks in a song recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Assisting pianist: Frederick Schauwecker. Program of songs by Handel, Arne, Schwartzendorf, Franz, Grieg, Lalo, Mascagni, Warren, Foster, Protheroe and Lehar; piano pieces by Carpenter, Glazunov and MacDowell.

Constitution Hall was well filled yesterday afternoon for the song recital of Richard Crooks, whose admirers relinquished two hours of balmy Easter weather for the sake of hearing him. They were rewarded by singing of distinguished style and mellifluous phrasing, for the tenor of the Metropolitan Opera was in his wonted command of tone production and artistic interpretation. Among our native vocalists he is one of the most conscientious in the maintenance of high standards, and he has never allowed his popularity to tempt him into careless methods.

BROWN

While his program contained some familiar material, it was far from trite and included several researched items, such as the affecting aria, "Total Eclipse," from Handel's oratorio, "Samson," with which he began the recital. In that opening group was heard another Handelian aria of contrasting mood, "Love Sounds the Alarm" from "Acis and Galatea," together with an air from Thomas Arne's setting of Milton's "Comus" and the ever-appealing "Plaisir d'amour" by Johann Schwartzendorf, whose adopted name of Jean Paul Martini still misleads people to believe that the song was composed by Padre Martini.

In his second group Mr. Crooks combined Grieg's "I Love Thee" and "A Dream" with two neglected and worthy songs by Robert Franz, "For Music" and "Hark, How Still." Franz wrote some 350 lieder which rank with those of Schubert and Schumann, but modern singers do not seem to be acquainted with them. The third group was devoted to two operatic excerpts, Lalo's "Vainement, ma bien aimee," from "Le Roy d'Ys," and Mascagni's "Apri la tua finestra," from "Iris."

Elinor Remick Warren's "Sailing Homeward" led the closing group, which included Stephen Foster's "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," Daniel Protheroe's setting of "Ah, Love, But a Day," and Lehar's "Maiden, My Maiden."

Needless to say, Mr. Crooks was entreated for extra songs at every interval, and he responded with Purcell's "Passing By," Fourdrain's "Chevauchee Cosaque," Massenet's "En fermant les yeux je vois," from "Manon." Franck's "Panis Angelicus" sung with English words, Galloway's "Beloved, It Is Morn," and Schubert's "Serenade."

Frederick Schauwecker, whose assistance at the piano was ever pleasing in discretion and neatness, contributed three solos: John Alden Carpenter's "American Tango," a nocturne by Glazunov and Edward MacDowell's "Scotch Poem." His readings had atmosphere and poesy, though one would have liked a little less of the open damper pedal. When recalled, he played his own arrangement of a Yuletide folksong.

Gunman Takes $24 From Southwest Bus

With six passengers looking on, a gunman last night held up the driver of a Capital Transit Co. bus at P and Half Street Southwest and escaped with $24 in bills and the change carrier. The driver was Richard E. Davis, 48, of 3549 Sixth Street Northwest.

Trainees Swamp Service Club In Washington

The Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club was a spot yesterday than which there was none more popular, it is safe to say.

With thousands of enlisted men in town on holiday leave, a sizable percentage of them dropped in at the homey place at 1015 L Street Northwest, where there was a "welcome" sign on the door and, inside, cake, music and good fellowship.

Until recently a club for former service men, it is now a recreational center and overnight stop for trainees and regulars. Saturday night, said Manager J. W. Caldin, there were 200 sleepers, although the normal bed capacity is 65.

"We had to send out and borrow 140 folding cots," said Caldin.

Sponsored and administered by the Woman's Army and Navy League, the club has another friend in the newly formed Woman's National Democratic Club Defense Project. This group has taken upon itself the responsibility of equipping a canteen which will provide 24-hour service and serve 3,000,000 meals annually.

The club's hostess is Mrs. Emma C. Steed, whose life has been wrapped up in soldiers' welfare work ever since she went overseas with a Red Cross unit in the World War. Her home is in Arlington, Va.

"But I'm moving in, just as soon as the canteen is finished and my quarters are ready," she said. With a wink, she added—"My husband's coming, too, though he doesn't know it yet."

Also nearing completion is the dormitory and annex and recreation hall, which are being built in what was formerly a garage, and before that a stable.

Working jointly, the Woman's Army and Navy League and the Woman's National Democratic Club Defense Project hope to make the club a complete facility which will serve thousands of enlisted men from nearby camps.

Citizens to Air D. C. Traffic Report Plan

Federation to Meet Saturday to Discuss Committee of 500 'Vigilante' System

Argument for and against a proposed citizens traffic educational committee of 500 members to report observed traffic violations is expected at a Federation of Citizens Associations meeting in the District Building Saturday night. The subject will be discussed by some of the 16 member associations who also hold regular meetings this week.

The plan was suggested by the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council in February and will be recommended Saturday in a report from the federation's safety committee, headed by Baxter Smith.

The annual dinner meeting of the West End Citizens Association will be today at 6:30 p. m. in the Fairfax Hotel. With no speakers listed, the program will be informal and devoted entirely to entertainment, Walter Mason, president, said yesterday.

List of Honor Guests

Guests of honor will include Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Mrs. Brown; Fire Chief Stephen T. D. C. Students May Join Army In Summer

College students, who wish to volunteer this summer for one year's military training in order to resume their college career in the fall of 1942, were assured of ample vacancies in District quotas during the summer months by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox yesterday.

Gen. Cox, Washington Selective Service director, quoted Secretary of War Stimson as stating, ". . . the department is certain that there will be ample vacancies in the Army during the months of June, July, August and September to accommodate all students who desire to begin their service during that period."

Local selective service headquarters, meanwhile, prepared to send 37 District selectees to Richmond today, the first group to be sent under a new local "man power division" setup. The division, under Ensign Edward J. Clarke, will be charged solely with calling up selectees from the local boards and transporting them to Army induction centers.

National Selective Service headquarters last night, in response to inquiries about availability of draft data, stated that "all records pertaining to the physical condition of the registrant and all answers on the questionnaire under dependency, except names and addresses of claimed dependents, and to answers on previous military service, shall be confidential and shall not be disclosed without the consent of the registrant."

"Without limiting any other rights he may have, a registrant shall be entitled to know of all entries on his own record, including his questionnaire and record of physical examination. He shall be further entitled to know of all statements and allegations which form part of his record."

Grocery Deliveryman Robbed by Change Game

A man's voice over the phone ordered $2 of groceries and change for a $20 bill from Schwartz' Grocery, at 1921 Eighteenth Street Northwest, yesterday morning, but when the deliveryman arrived the "customer" took only the change.

The customer was a gunman, who waited with a companion in the hallway at 1735 Willard Street Northwest, for the arrival of the "order." The two robbers escaped with $18.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Charles Coburn Pleads Cause of 'Future Great'

Has Worried Eye on Future of the Stage; Two Important Events on Tonight's Docket; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT NOW SEEMS MORE THAN EVER LAMENTABLE that the probable requirements of national defense should have occasioned the abandonment of this year's Mohawk Drama Festival, celebrated every summer, these past several years, on the campus of Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y., under the managerial directorship of the distinguished Charles Coburn, a veteran of 50 years on the stage.

BELL

Something over an hour's conversation with Mr. Coburn in Manager Hardie Meakin's office, at RKO-Keith's last Friday night, offered ample corroboration of what this column has so long contended—that the Mohawk Drama Festival represents one of the most valuable services that could be rendered the contemporary theater. It is not an enterprise conducted for personal or corporate profit, but a solidly founded effort to establish a source of supply of the future great of the American theater.

With stock and vaudeville virtually extinct and burlesque reduced to the status of strip-teaser exhibitionism, there remains no training school for the actors that are to keep the American theater alive. It is Mr. Coburn's view that the future welfare of the stage rests with the colleges of the United States.

"During the eight weeks we usually operate at Schenectady," he points out, "we are members of the faculty of Union College. It is one of the few institutions of higher learning in this country that have grasped the fundamental fact that potential actors are entitled to profesisonal training by those who know the theater in its every department. As things are going now, amateurs are training amateurs to continue to be amateurs. Amateurs always want to begin at the top. The training of the true profesisonal begins at the bottom. That is why we have assembled casts of principals for our Mohawk productions comprised of the finest artists we have been able to secure. With them, in the minor roles, we have associated the ardent students who take the stage and their ambitions seriously. Through the complex process of coaching, the friendly advice of sympathetic professionals and absorption, they must in time find themselves actors. But it is something that cannot be learned from a book or accomplished overnight. The only way is to get in there with people who know and keep swinging. The idea has the advantage of sound logic. After all, law is taught by jurists, medicine by experienced doctors and surgeons and engineering by seasoned experts. Acting should no less be taught by professionals who know what every department of the theater is all about. If the breadth of view of Union College could be imparted to all the other colleges in the United States, the theater, within a decade or two might experience the most glorious renaissance in its history."

Has Proved Artistically and Economically Sound

I think I am violating no confidence in disclosing that the eight summer weeks of the Mohawk Drama Festival entail an operating expense of approximately $42,000 and must be self-sustaining. The only endowment the project ever has had was an initial $12,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, I think it was. If Mr. Coburn can do it, others can do it and the theater will stand in a fair way of becoming itself again. More power to him and any others who may profit by his splendid example.

Incidentally, the self-appointed "one-man Chamber of Commerce" who piloted Mr. Coburn around on his recent visit to Miami, Fla., turned out to be Dr. Raymond Bondy, brother of the distinguished actress, Beulah Bondi. And that touched off a flowerpot of reminiscences. Ray and your reporter were seatmates through the first three years of primary school in our native Valparaiso, Ind., before Beulah had ever gotten around to the important business of being born. The world isn't so big, is it?

There are a couple of events on for tonight that it would be just as well not to overlook. One is the metropolitan premiere of John Golden's production of "Theatre," starring Cornelia Otis Skinner, at the National; the other, the first of six Monday night broadcasts by "Dr. I. Q." (Jimmy McClaine), from the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater, at 9. The latter is an "extra added attraction," over and above Horace Heidt and his Musical Knights, on the stage, and "The Trial of Mary Dugan," on the screen. Prices, first-come-first-served and house policy unaltered.

Dots and Dashes

Everett Marshall, starring in "Blossom Time," at the National, was another of last week's genial companions. . . . While Mr. Marshall feels anything but contempt for Franz Schubert, he would like to get hold of a new musical play, with some new songs he could "sell" and a role he could get his teeth into . . . Loew's Washington Cadet Band, under the direction of Capt. Ray Hart, will play at the annual Easter egg rolling on the White House grounds today . . . The flatteringly thoughtful Jean Dalrymple, whose last chore in Washington was "Mr. and Mrs. North," a substantial Broadway hit, took time out Saturday night to phone from the airport between planes . . . She was bound for Mexico City to pilot Grace Moore through a series of concert appearances . . . Will drop by again on her way back in a fortnight—so she says and so I hope . . . "Dr. I. Q.", by the way, will be honor guest at the Wednesday luncheon of the Advertising Club of Washington, at the Raleigh, Al Ehrlich tells me . . . Aspiring players will be auditioned for the eighth season of the Roadside Theater in Thomson School, next Monday and Tuesday, April 21 and 22, at 7:30 p. m. . . . Mistress Kitty Romney says the season will open in June and run the usual 14 weeks . . . The Thomson School is at Twelfth and L Streets Northwest.

Ode-to-Easter Note

Yesterday was pretty nice outdoors—so they tell me.

BEULAH BONDI, IRENE DUNNE AND CARY GRANT

and another unidentified little codger, as they will be seen in Columbia's production of "Penny Serenade," opening Friday on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. It is only necessary to recall the other pictures in which Miss Dunne and Mr. Grant have appeared together to know what to anticipate

World Events Amply Covered

Pictures of the new Hongkong—armed for defense—easily top the foreign section of news events unfolded on the screen at the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week. Under British officer training, both Chinese and Sikhs ably man harbor patrols and antiaircraft batteries.

On this side of the world, Uncle Sam's mammoth U. S. S. North Carolina, first new battle-wagon in 18 years, is launched with fitting ceremonies at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and Secretary of the Navy Knox makes a stirring address to the Nation. American bluejackets are cheered by record-breaking throngs in Australia while crack riders from this British possession stage a wild and woolly rodeo. Brazil trains harbor defense sailors at Rio, and in Rome Mussolini makes a "surprise" appearance as he speaks to the S. R. O. sign. Axis ships are shown being seized in Mexican waters, as Churchill and Winant sign the history making treaty leasing air and naval bases to the United States. King George and Queen Elizabeth eagerly inspect Canadian troops and new R. A. F. pilots and gunners are shown at gunnery practice.

In Washington the Polish premier visits President Roosevelt and lays a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. On the "home front," events covered include non-com. training at Fort Meade; new 25-ton Army tank in action; defense housing speeded in California; new clipper for Great Britain arriving in New York from the West Coast; Home Defense Units in training at New York, with shell production speeded and air raid fire-fighting apparatus tested.

"Information Please," in a new setting, brings tennis champ Alice Marble as guest expert. "Rodeo Dough" is the story of two dizzy damsels from Kokomo, a wild bull, and the movie star rodeo at Palm Springs. Ski fans will enjoy "Snow Eagles." Popeye stars in "Olive's Sweepstake Ticket," a screamingly funny cartoon.

Gayety

Ushering in the spring season with what promises to mean much in the way of fun and frolic is Manager Ferber's current attraction, aptly entitled "Easter Frolics." Here is a bill we found most entertaining, from the comedy antics of clever George Murray to the gay and colorful beauty parades of titain-haired Vickie Welles.

Possessing a cute figure, good looks and a nice personality, Miss Welles offers several musical specialties which rate among her best.

Headed by funny George Murray and Bert Carr, the comedy skits are hilarious. Murray is at his best, offering several novel and witty "bits" and introducing several familiar items, including the laugh provoking "School Days" number, one of the funniest ever seen here.

On the distaff side of the bill are such sirens as Alice Jewell, Helen Colby, Pat Cornell and Allene Dale. Miss Cornell's acrobatic specialties are tops, while Miss Dale still remains one of the circuit's best "talking women."

Completing the cst of a well balanced production are Charlie Schultz, straight man; Jack Lyons, singer, and the Vestry Brothers.

ART JOHN.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 13.

RADIO DEPARTMENT: The Canadian government, which is sponsoring a new radio program, invited all the managers of the American stations which broadcast that program to visit Toronto . . . As an added gesture of good will between the Canadian and American governments, the Toronto officials presented to each junketeer a genuine Hudson's Bay blanket . . . The border officials here do not recognize such amity movements. An import tax of $5.30 was assessed on each blankt.

SOCIAL NOTES: A noted English author, who now is doing special work for His Majesty's government in London, has been assigned to a bomb-shelter in the crypt at St. Paul's Cathedral . . . He wrote to his publisher here, reporting that the crypt was most comfortable, despite the fact that so many people are buried there. "Every night I sleep between Mrs. Pepys and Lord Nelson," the author confessed, "and it's quite cosy."

BOOK DEPARTMENT: Joseph Hergesheimer lives in West Chester, Pa. . . . He came to Philadelphia for a visit last week, and a friend asked him why he lived in a small town. "I 'ive there," explained Hergesheimer, "because I hate authors" . . . "Can't you live in a big city and hate authors as well?" the friend asked . . . "It's better, in West Chester," said Hergesheimer, "because there are no other authors there."

LOCAL NEWS: William Force Dick, half-brother of John Jacob Astor, is being drafted. He reports that his brother, John Henry Dick, will join the Army when he finishes at Yale, in six weeks, and that John Jacob Astor will join in June . . . Mrs. Vincent Sheean will accompany her husband to London next week. Robert Capa, the photographer, will leave them—to do a book with Mrs. Sheean . . . Budd Schulberg isn't surprised at the Boston censorship of his book, "What Makes Sammy Run?" At Dartmouth Budd wrote the show, "Banned in Boston."

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: Col. Sullivan, of Fort McArthur, San Pedro, Calif., has issued a new order addressed to the commissioned officers, the non-coms and the privates. The order directs them not to annoy Private James Stewart by asking him for autographs or to pose with them for a snapshot.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Hugh Charles, who wrote "There'll Always Be an England," drove his car to Bristol, parked it in a garage and then attended to a business mission. When his job was finished, Charles returned to his garage—and found that it had been bombed and that his car was destroyed. "There'll always be an England," he announced, "but this now makes it a personal issue between Hitler and me."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: The producers of the new juke-box movies have been wondering if it's possible to get the movie critics to review the shorts shown in these slot machines. "All the big movie houses invite the reviewers and give them passes," one producer reported, "so how can we match that—with our machine problem?" . . . "That's easy," another suggested. "Let's give them slugs."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 13 (INS).—Picturesque Buffalo Bill, whose flowing locks, sombrero and prancing horse delighted everyone who saw his famous "Wild West Show," is the hero selected by Harry Sherman for his first $1,200,000 technicolor epic. Joel McCrea, almost as much at home on horseback as William Cody (Buffalo Bill), will play the pony express rider who got his name from furnishing Buffalo meat to the Kansas Pacific Railway. "Pahaska," the story by Frank Winch, Buffalo Bill's press agent, takes in a span of 50 years, starting when Bill first went to New York at the age of 22.

PARSONS

Well, here's a surprise! Gregory la Cava, "U" director who said never again after he obtained his divorce from Beryl Morse, is married again. He has been married since December and his bride is the former Mrs. Grace Garland, wealthy widow.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Marlene Dietrich and Jean Gabin, a colorful scheherazade twosome; Joan Crawford left for New York tonight bag and baggage, taking her baby to remain until fall. Joan likes New York; Ann Rutherford leaves tomorrow to spend Easter with her boy friend, Charles Isaacs; the Henry Fondas are spending Easter in Omaha with Hank's family.

Victor Mature, who was rushed to the hospital in New York for an appendectomy, reported today doing nicely; John M. Stahl in a serious huddle trying to borrow Maureen O'Hara for the femme lead in "Our Wife;" that was the role Rita Hayworth was to have played.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Hollywood, April 13.

HOPPER

"They should have been with me when I did an Australian Western in that country. The cameraman had never shot an exterior in his life. There was no director, and only a few pages of script. I hadn't contracted for all that. I was no budding Orson Welles, but I went there to make a picture, and by golly, I made one! Of course, it didn't get write-ups like 'Citizen Kane,' but it did get shown, and I'm still workin'! And haven't yet had to borrow cigarette money, either."

Sam Goldwyn has made one of the best casting strikes of the year. He's been able to pry Dean Jagger loose from Twentieth Century and borrow him to play the husband opposite Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes." And believe me, Bette will have to extend herself because that guy's good.

What's going on? With Anna Lee lunching with C. B. DeMille at Paramount, does that mean she's going to be in "Reap the Wild Wind?"

Charles Boyer tells me he wants to go to Montreal on a good-will speaking tour after completion of "Hold Back the Dawn." Charles, who's still a French citizen and deeply sympathetic with Britain, wants to try to offset the growing breach between England and the Vichy government. And I'd like to go along and help, too.

Director Garson Kanin said: "I'm getting tired of these phony names they always show on theater marquees in films. Let's put up a real one for this scene." So Kanin wired the Theater Guild for permission, and when you see "Tom, Dick and Harry," the sign on the marquee will read: "Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in 'The Taming of the Shrew'."

While Ida Lupino was shopping on the Boulevard, she stopped to admire a little curly-haired boy standing there, and when she started walking away, he yelled, "Mamma! Mamma!" Just then some friend of hers passed by and gave her THAT look, and Ida stood there until the child's mother turned up. "That's what you get for patting a curly top," says Ida.

Are Warners giving out contradictions! First they didn't want "The Man Who Came to Dinner" with a beard. Now I'll be darned if they aren't trying to get Cary Grant to grow one. And if he does, he's nerts! Imagine growing a beard while on a honeymoon with the richest girl in the world! I'd call that carrying art too far, and so would Barbara. Next thing you know, they'll be asking him to play the picture not in a wheel chair, but in a bed.

Washington Turns Out to Celebrate Easter

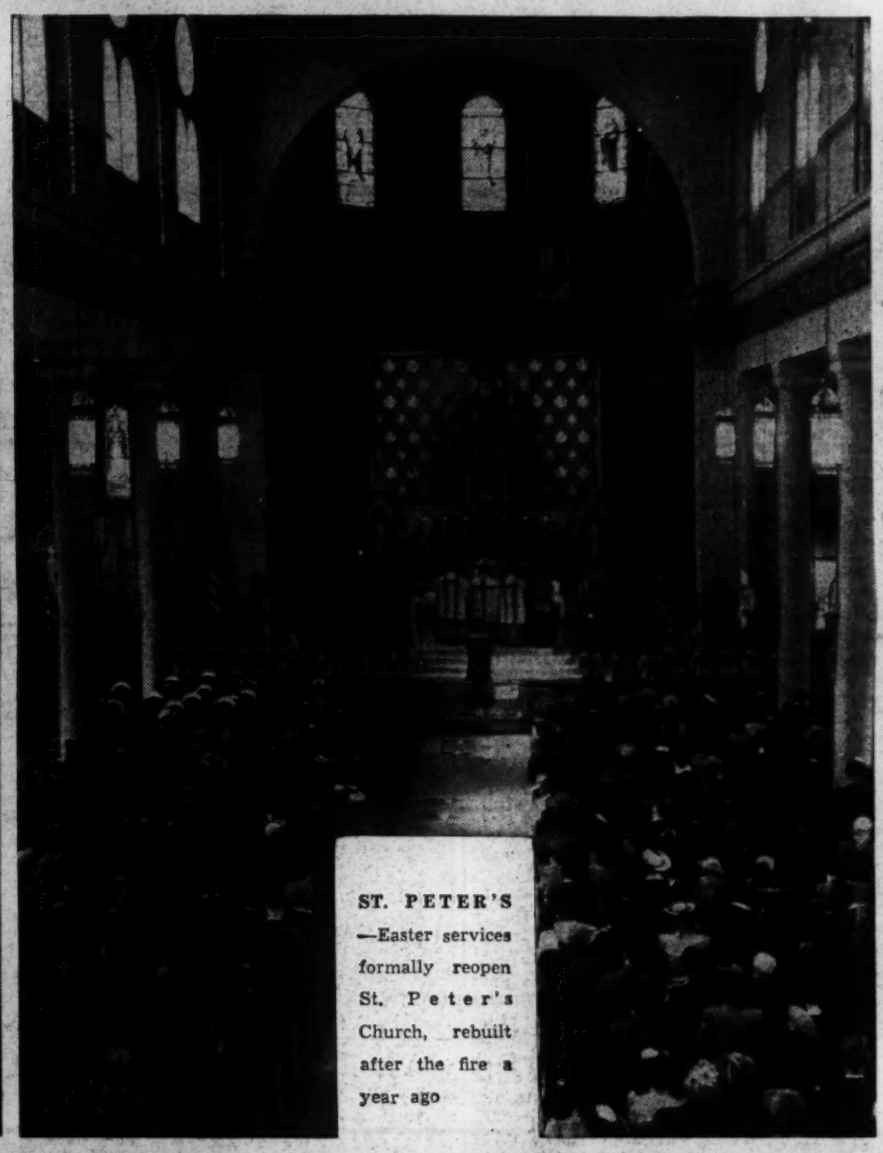
WORSHIP AT SUNRISE—Thousands of Capital residents and tourists joined in Easter worship in the ampitheater in Arlington Cemetery. The crowd was said to be the largest ever to attend the service sponsored by the Knights Templar

ROOSEVELTS AT SERVICE—An altar boy bore the cross of the Episcopal Church in the background as the Rev. Howard Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas' Church, greeted the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the church door after services



ST. PETER'S—Easter services formally reopen St. Peter's Church, rebuilt after the fire a year ago

FLOWERS ABOUND—Louise Hauser admires some of the azaleas at the height of bloom for the Easter show at the Botanic Garden. Yesterday's number of visitors was the greatest in the garden's history

EASTER WORSHIPERS—Among the thousands who worshiped in Washington churches yesterday and paraded afterward were (left picture) Elizabeth Everett, 3, and Bobby Haynes, 3½, in their Easter finery as they went to Sunday school at Calvary Baptist Church. This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Scene: Griffith Stadium

Even as Philadelphia flaunts its scrapple and pepper pot before the gourmets, and old Vienna was proud of its weinerschnitzel, Washington serves up its own specialty today—the opening game with all the fixings. In all other major league cities, the opening game is as hamburger. Here alone, it is a production.

POVICH

Folks who have seen the smart Washington opener, ablaze with bunting, packed with a strong patriotic note and staged against a White House backdrop, sniff disdainfully, like a reflex action, at the weak take-offs in other big league cities.

We don't mean to be harsh with the other big league towns. They don't have the tools. But neither do they seem to have the enthusiasm, either. It always did seem that they could dig up something better than their ratty, off-key bands and straggly player parades. Until recently, in Philadelphia, the National Anthem came rasping out of a loud speaker off a weather-beaten, 30-cent recording that was tucked away with not too much care from April to April.

Maybe it's the hopelessness of trying to compete with Washington's opening day glitter, but the fact is they've thrown up the sponge. There is little thrilling about it in New York, or Brooklyn, where they call upon a borough president to throw out the first ball. Or in Cleveland, or Cincinnati, where the high ranking official in the lone beflagged box is very apt to be the collector of taxes. To folks inured to Washington's openers, it is hammy stuff.

It's possible to belittle Washington's opening-game show, perhaps, on the basis that scant credit attaches to the producers because there is only one President of the United States and he has been dropped in the lap of the Washington club. But from that point, Clark Griffith has seized upon the situation with great zest. If it was a smart ballyhoo trick in 1912, it has become a serious ritual with Griffith in the last 20 years. He's proud of his show; in fact, whatever it may have been in the beginning, it's no longer a show with Griffith. It's a stern, patriotic duty.

'Hand Me My Pearl Gray Fedora'

This morning, Griffith will dress with more than usual care. Out of the closet will come the neat gray pinstripe suit which, like its predecessors of the same cut and color, has been his opening game choice for 20-odd years. He'll call for his pearl gray hat and his black shoes. He'll go to his office at nine o'clock and fidget until 2:45 p. m. when the Presidential cavalcade noses up to the stadium.

Yesterday, Mr. Griffith made an important phone call. He called the office of Vice President Wallace. It is the Vice President who will accompany Griffith at the head of the march to the center field flagpole, and inasmuch as Mr. Wallace is a new Vice President, Griffith was a bit perturbed yesterday. He didn't know the size of Mr. Wallace's feet. That was important because Mr. Griffith always provides rubbers to fit his Vice Presidential guests if the weather turns rainy and the march to the flagpole is a wet one. Handy to the Vice Presidential box today will be both rubbers and galoshes size nine.

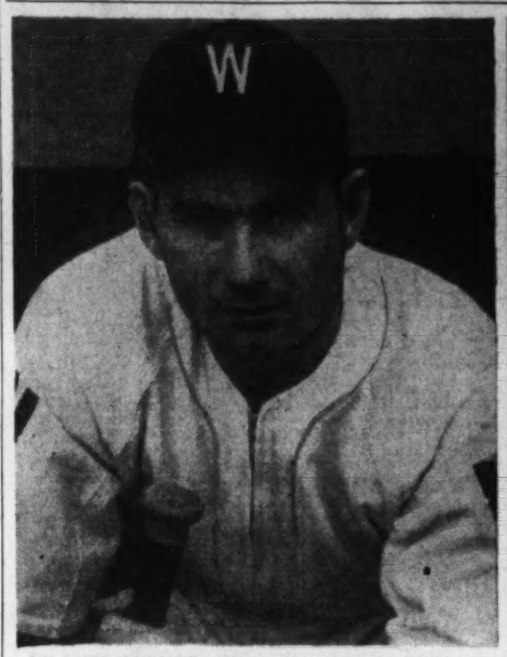
Every day for the past week, White House Secret Service men have been inspecting the Washington park and traversing every inch of the route the President will take to his box seat. Never has there been an untoward incident in the reception of the President at Griffith Stadium. Nearest thing to a sinister note was the ejection of loud-mouthed Patsy O'Toole, a Detroit character, from a box too near the President's, by Presidential request. Box seats for yards around the Presidential box and directly overhead are distributed only to well-known citizens.

Baseball Indebted to Clark Griffith

The presence of the Nation's No. One fan has brought to baseball the National game aspect it couldn't buy otherwise. For that favor, the industry is indebted to Griffith. Until recently it was solely an American League feature, with Griffith traipsing to the White House each year to present the President and the First Lady with gold-engraved passes on behalf of the American League. A few years ago, the National League caught on to the idea, and the National League president has been accompanying Griffith to the White House to get his league into the picture.

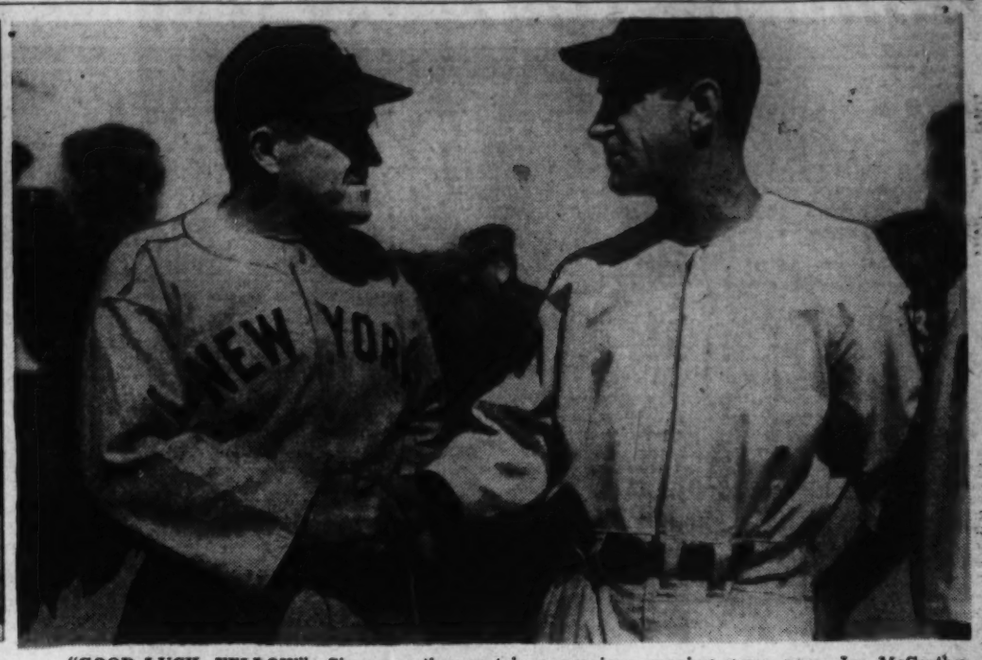
The pitcher who will go to the mound for Washington today is being given an especial honor. He may not be Washington's best pitcher, but that does not exactly matter. This is an honor that the Washington manager parcels out each season to the pitcher most deserving of it. For years after he had passed his peak, Walter Johnson pitched Washington's opening games, because he was Johnson and it was traditional that he should. Long and faithful service is always taken into account by the Washington manager, because here the opener is no mere ball game—it's a game apart from all the rest.

Bloodworth Beaned; Out of Today's Opener



TO MISS OPENER—Jimmy Bloodworth, Nats' first-line second baseman. Victim yesterday of a bean ball in the last inning of the last exhibition, he won't face the Yankees today

BUDDY'S BACK—You'll see this face at second for the Nats. It's Buddy Myer, oldest player on the club



"GOOD LUCK, FELLOW"—Shown as they met in a previous opening game pose, Joe McCarthy (left), manager of the New York Yankees, and Bucky Harris, manager of the Nats, will reenact this exchange of greetings at Griffith Stadium today for the benefit of the legions of photographers and newsreel cameramen who'll turn out to see President Roosevelt toss out the first ball

Priddy Out, Yank Infield Is Revised

Sturm Starts at First, Gordon at 2d; Injuries Break Up Plans For New Line-up

Copyright by New York Tribune.

New York, April 13.—The Yankees departed tonight for Washington, where they will open the championship season tomorrow with the Senators. Playing the "President's Special" a day ahead of the general Major League opening tomorrow, President Roosevelt will throw out the first ball.

Marius Russo, a young left-hander will have the honor of pitching this game for the Yankees. Emil Leonard will oppose them for the Senators.

Because of injuries, the Yankees will star the season with a disarranged infield. Only half of the much publicized second base combination of Priddy and Rizzuto will be in action, and Joe Gordon, after spending the entire training session learning how to be a first baseman, will be back at his old place at second base. Johnny Sturm, a rookie who has been bounced around, will have the satisfaction of starting at first.

Priddy Not to Play

Priddy, the second baseman in the original setup, is out with a sprained ankle. It was this injury in Friday's game in Brooklyn which caused Gordon to be taken off first base for the first time since he donned the mitt.

Red Rolfe, the regular third baseman, who has been laid up with an inflamed tendon in his right ankle since the first of the month, returned to duty today and probably will be in the line-up Monday. If the exercise today aggravated his ailment so that he cannot play, Frank Crosetti, last year's shortstop, will substitute for Rolfe. Crosetti has been out for the past couple of days with a lame shoulder.

The return of Gordon to second base in the existing emergency is, presumably, temporary. But if Sturm continues to hit as well as he did in the Brooklyn series, it may be advisable to keep him at first. He plays that position much better than Gordon who is still new at it.

Bill Dickey is slated to catch tomorrow, but he has been bothered for a week by a Charlie horse in his thigh. So Buddy Rosar may be behind the bat in the opener.

Much has happened to the Yankees this spring. Joe McCarthy, the manager, conceived and put in operation an infield made up of Rolfe, Rizzuto, Priddy and Gordon, but he finds himself starting the season with Rolfe, Rizzuto, Gordon and Strum.

33,000 Expected to See President Toss Out First Ball at 3 P. M.; New York Favored At 7-5; Myer Replaces Injured Bloodworth

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Jimmy Bloodworth, struck on the head by a pitched ball at Baltimore yesterday in an eleventh-hour accident, will be missing from the Washington infield today when the Nats and Yankees launch the 1941 season at Griffith Stadium.

The 23-year-old second baseman who slumped across home plate in the Baltimore park when felled by the pitch, escaped serious injury but was put under care in a Baltimore Hospital for 24 hours. X-ray pictures revealed no skull fracture.

Bloodworth, a slugging star in the Nats' spring game and key man in the 1941 infield, had escaped injury of any sort in the South. Ironically, he was felled yesterday in the ninth inning of the Nats' final exhibition game. Washington was playing the Baltimore Orioles.

A Baltimore "kid" pitcher, Russell Niller, hit Bloodworth with a high, inside fast ball. The player was struck high on the side of the skull as he attempted to duck the pitch. He was carried from the field on a stretcher and taken to nearby Union Memorial Hospital.

Manager Bucky Harris, who announced that the veteran Buddy Myer would replace Bloodworth at second base in today's inaugural, was told by hospital physicians that Bloodworth could return to the lineup tomorrow, barring complications.

President Makes Ninth Start

Franklin D. Roosevelt, a career pitcher at Griffith Stadium, second only to Walter Johnson in long service, makes his ninth opening-day start this afternoon. The veteran right-hander who took his contract argument to the people last November and was signed for four more years, will return to action at 3 o'clock.

The Presidential pitch from the beflagged White House box will retire ceremony from the proceedings and send the Nats and Yankees onto the field for big league baseball's 1941 unveiling. The day is being greeted as a refreshing interlude in the grimness of the times, and for the next six months baseball will muscle into the national interest.

To the mound will stride big Dutch Leonard to flaunt his knuckle ball in the faces of the Yankees. His pitching opponent is expected to be Marius Russo, youthful but highly-rated Yankee left-hander who won 14 games against eight defeats last season. The Yankees arrived in Washington at 11 o'clock last night and moved into long-reserved hotel rooms.

Persons not wholly interested in the hurling ability of One-Pitch Roosevelt or the pregame ceremony, last night were quoting odds

WMAL May Get Nat Broadcast Okay Today

Announcement that the Washington Club's home and road games would be broadcast this season over Station WMAL is expected today.

"Agreement has virtually been reached but there are certain confirmations to be made," said one of the negotiators yesterday. "I believe however that today will bring the definite announcement that the games will be broadcast."

Commercial sponsors of the game would be the General Mills Co., cereal manufacturers, and the L. P. Stewart Motor Co., of Washington. Arch McDonald would be the announcer.

Today's opening game, including the pregame ceremonies, will be broadcast by Station WINX with George Gow and Sam Lawder handling the ceremonial color and play by play. Station WMAL will join the broadcast of the game at 4:15 o'clock.

Harridge Names A. L. Umpires

Chicago, April 13 (AP).—President Will Harridge, of the American Baseball League, announced today the umpires for Tuesday's opening games:

Chicago at Cleveland—Summers, Basil, Stewart and Rue

Detroit at St. Louis—Geisel, Pipgrass and Passarella.

Philadelphia at New York—Ormsby, Hubbard and Rommel.

WASHINGTON at Boston—McGowan, Quinn and Grieve.

Yankees, Reds Are Doyle's Flag Choices

By the Associated Press

New York, April 13.—The Cincinnati Reds and New York Yankees were made favorites for the National and American League pennant races today by Jack Doyle, nationally known Broadway price-layer.

He quoted the Yanks at 7 to 5 in the American League with the Cleveland Indians on almost even terms at 3 to 2, while making the World Champion Reds a 6 to 5 choice in the senior circuit compared to 9 to 5 quoted for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Both Detroit's defending American League Champions and the St. Louis Cardinals in the National were rated third at 4 to 1 shots.

His quotations follow:

AMERICAN LEAGUE	1st	2nd	3rd
New York	7-5	1-3	out

Spring Hunt Meeting Proves 'Fall' Event

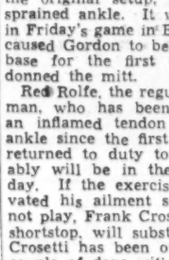
Middleburg, Va., April 13 (AP).—Although billed as the annual Middleburg spring hunt meeting, yesterday's steeplechases at Glenwood Course proved to be a "fall" event.

Eleven horses went down during the six races, three more pulled up before the finish, two ran off the course and the six reporters on the press stand are still unable to account for one starter.

Taft Wright Ill; Chisox Lose Him For Opener

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 13.—Taft Wright, hard-hitting Chicago White Sox outfielder, will miss the opening of the American League season.



WRIGHT

The pudgy fly-chaser, a victim of influenza during spring training in California, suffered a relapse late Saturday night and was moved to Mercy Hospital. He was reported much improved tonight although his temperature still is far from normal.

He is expected to be out of the line-up for about a month. During his absence Larry Rosenthal will play right field.

Nats Beat Orioles, Lose Bloodworth

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, April 13.—In a game marred by the beaning of Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth of the Nats, the Washington team thumped out a 9-to-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles today. It was the Nats' seventeenth victory in 24 training games.

Bloodworth, struck on the head by a pitch in the ninth inning and removed to Union Memorial Hospital "for observation," was the third Washington infielder hit during the game. Shortstop Cecil Travis and George Archie were also struck by Baltimore pitching but were uninjured.

The Nats won the game with a fourth-inning rally that scored five runs and wiped out Baltimore's 5-1 lead. The bases were filled by Pitcher Smoll when he walked Welaj and Pofahl and hit Travis. Bloodworth singled two runs home, and three more scored on a pair of errors, a walk to Evans and a scratch hit by George Case.

Sundra Pounded

Steve Sundra, making his last exhibition game start for the Nats, was pounded for all of the Orioles' five runs and four of their seven hits in the five innings he pitched. He walked three batters.

Rookie Jim Dean turned in an impressive four-inning job in finishing the game. He held the Orioles scoreless, allowing only three hits.

In the fifth inning, Sundra gave up three runs to the Orioles when Art Graham lifted a homer over the fence with two on base.

Catcher Jake Early clinched the game for Washington when he hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning. Cecil Travis made four hits in four times at bat.

Baseball Again King As Fans Await Opener

By Judson Bailey
By the Associated Press

New York, April 13.—Twisting the attention of the Nation from the grim headlines of war, labor and the like for at least a couple of days, baseball's major leagues are ready to stage their spellbinding opening day spectacles tomorrow and Tuesday.

The scene at Washington tomorrow will be duplicated to some extent in eight other cities the next day as mayors and sundry other citizens throw out balls to give a formal flourish to the regular opening games of the National and American Leagues.

Providing good weather continues the nine tussles scheduled for the two days should draw approximately a quarter of a million fans into the big steel and concrete arenas and millions of other Americans from coast to coast will have their eyes and ears glued to the getaway through newspapers and radio.

Reds, Yanks Favorites

The world champion Cincinnati Reds, twice winners in the National League, have been established as favorites to win their third straight pennant in the senior circuit and the New York Yankees, who won four times in a row in the American League before being dethroned last season, have been given a slight edge in their comeback campaign.

An Old-Timer Looks Back on Hectic Days in Baseball

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

We ought to be thankful for baseball because it takes our mind off any other kind of war.

I had a lot of fun traveling with Clark Grimth and I could never get him to admit he traded a pitcher to Joe Cantillion for a bird dog. Joe couldn't admit it and neither would the pitcher, even the dog denied it.

Those were the days before college men had worked their way into the big leagues and the going was rough and tough. I remember when Ty Cobb claimed the right-of-way on the baselines and chopped down Frank Baker, Eddie Foster and other third-sackers in rotation.

One day I wrote, "Before going out to the ball park this afternoon Ty Cobb stopped at the barber shop to have his spikes honed."

Well, Ty had a temper like a porcupine with ingrown quills and he declared war on me just short of cannibalism.

You know the old boy didn't shake hands with me until his baseball career was over? Ping Bodie was another fellow who was looking for me after Ping started to steal second, and was thrown out by 3 yards.

I wrote, "Ping's head was full of larceny, but his feet were honest."

We have some pretty good baseball writers today. But I would like to slap the clock in the face for just another afternoon with Ring Lardner, Bill McGeeghan, Tommy Rice, Bozeman Bulger and Damon Runyon.

Bonham and Donald Shutout Dodgers for Yankees, 3 to 0

Brooklyn Gets Only 2 Hits In Exhibition

Boston Bees Defeat Red Sox, 10 to 4; Cincinnati Evens Series With Detroit

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 13.—Ernie Bonham and Atley Donald shut out the Dodgers with two hits today as the New York Yankees took the final game of their spring exhibition series, 3 to 0, before 16,351 spectators. The victory gave the Yanks an even break in ten games with Brooklyn this spring.

Both Brooklyn hits—a dobule by Dixie Walker and a single by Joe Medwick, were made off Bonham in his five-inning stay on the mound.

The Yankees bunched four of their1 2 hits to score two runs off Kirby Higbe in the second inning then collected another tally off Curt Davis in the sixth.

Bees Beat Red Sox

Boston, April 13 (AP).—The Boston Bees came back with a bang today to break even in the two-game city series with the Red Sox by slamming 14 hits, including two homers, for a 10-to-3 verdict.

Babe Dahlgren and Max West connected for round-trippers in succession in the seventh inning after the National Leaguers had taken an early lead which they never relinquished.

Manny Salvo, Jim Tobin and Frank Lamanna limited the Sox to eight hits, three of them by Pete Fox, who got two doubles and a single.

All the Red Sox runs came in the fifth, when Stan Spence doubled with the bases loaded after Hale singled, Tabor doubled and Pinch Hitter Tom Judd walked.

Reds Even Series

Cincinnati, April 13 (AP).—Booming out 20 hits, the Cincinnati Reds today evened at two-all their exhibition series with the Detroit Tigers by a 16-4 victory.

Six Cincinnati hits were doubles—allowed on a ground rule for swats into folding chairs placed for Tuesday's opener.

Bucky Walters, working his first game after two full weeks of nursing a leg injury, gave nine hits in seven innings and looked good. Johnny Vandermeer finished.

The Reds slugged schoolboy Rowe from the mound in the fifth, when Lonnie Frey opened with a single, Walters doubled and Eddie Joost swatted his second two-bagger. Dizzy Trout fared little better in the last four frames.

The game tied at 2-2 until the last half of the fourth, when the Reds batted around, scored five runs on four hits and two walks and turned the game into a rout.

A's Beat Pirates

Wichita, Kans., April 13 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics bid farewell to the Pittsburgh Pirates today by fashioning a 7-6 victory over the National League entry in the finale of the teams' spring training tour. The A's won the series of 13 games by the same count as today's score.

A 15-hit barrage, including a home run, double and single by Catcher Frank Hayes, won today's game for the A's. Virgil Davis homered for the Pirates. The game was cut to eight innings by agreement.

Phils Swamp Colts

Richmond, Va., April 13 (AP).—Bill Nagel, the Phillies' new second baseman, socked three homers today to lead the Phils to a 12-to-5 victory over the Richmond Colts. It was the last spring exhibition game for the Phils. They finished with a mark of 13 won and 14 lost.

Nagel, who now has connected for eight round-trippers in seven games, was not the only one to hit for the circuit. Nick Etten, Danny Litwhiler, Ben Warren and Heinie Mueller, of the Phils, and Lloyd Lanning, of Richmond, also whaled out four-baggers.

Two 'Big Six' Tests Faced By Cavaliers

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 13.—Virginia's Cavaliers, State baseball champions in 1940, will get two "Big Six" tests this week when Washington and Lee invades Lambeth Field on Easter Monday and Virginia Tech's strong squad follows suit on Friday.

The surprising Techmen are now leading the State race as the result of triumphs over Richmond's southern conference titleholders and William and Mary's highly-regarded club last week.

Virginia and the Indians have broken even in two "Big Six" encounters each this season and V. M. I. and Richmond have dropped one start apiece. The game tomorrow will be the first in the "Big Six" for W. & L.'s Generals, who had two State pennant clashes rained out earlier in the season.

V. P. I. Meets V. M. I.

A third "Big Six" diamond engagement this week will bring together those arch athletic rivals, V. P. I. and V. M. I. at Lexington.

Seventeen other games are listed with Michigan, Marietta, St. John's, Milligan and American U. continuing the parade of out-of-State invaders of the Old Dominion. W. & M. will hit the road Friday, and Saturday, for games at Maryland and Navy, while W. & L. will travel at the same time to play George Washington and Georgetown.

Track activity will get off to an early start with W. & M. runners meeting W. & L. at Lexington on Tuesday. Five dual meets are set for Saturday, W. & L. at Richmond, V. M. I. at V. P. I., W. & M. at Maryland, Randolph-Macon at Gallaudet and Lynchburg at Bridgewater.

Golf on Program

Golf features will be Virginia's team meetings with North Carolina Monday, V. M. I. Thursday and V. P. I. on Friday. Michigan, Manhattan, George Washington and Loyola tennis teams will tour the State during the week.

W.-L. Cage Captain Elected Student Head

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lexington, Va., April 13.—Howard Dobbins, of Louisville, Ky., captain of Washington and Lee's 1941 basketball team, was elected president of the student body in the annual elections.

Running unopposed, Dobbins rolled up a huge "vote of confidence." He is a student in the W. and L. law school and is a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Maryland Most Active On College Program

Georgetown Nine Engages Syracuse Today At 2:30; G. W. Faces Two Foes This Week

By Jack Munhall

With the Easter holidays at an end, the college major sports program returns to normalcy this week with nine baseball games, a pair of lacrosse matches and a dual track meet.

Georgetown, only undefeated nine hereabouts, launches the week's baseball card today at 2:30 with strong Syracuse, and will play two other games here during the next seven days, against Michigan Thursday and Washington and Lee Saturday. The Hoyas proved Saturday in their exhibition victory over Cameo Furniture that they have not suffered much in the 10-day layoff since their triumph over Harvard.

Maryland's athletes will participate in three baseball games, the two lacrosse matches and also the lone track meet slated. The nine will engage Syracuse Tuesday, Washington and Lee Thursday and William and Mary Friday. The Terp lacrosse team tackles Penn State at 2:30 today and Rutgers at 3:30 Saturday in the second half of a double-header. In the opening half of the twin bill the Old Liner track team will make its home outdoor debut in a meet with William and Mary starting at 1:30.

Colonials Play Twice

George Washington's nine, idle since its impressive double-header victory over Harvard and V. M. I., faces a pair of games here. The Colonials meet Washington and Lee Friday and St. John's of Brooklyn Saturday.

American University's nine, a disappointment in its first three games which produced one-sided lickings for the Eagles, makes only one start during the week, against Western State Teachers College here on Wednesday.

Syracuse, flashing surprising strength in its 8-0 opening game shutout of Navy, figures to fully test a Georgetown team that some observers have rated as the best developed by Joe Judge at the Hilltop. The Orange, far behind in conditioning due to bad weather which forced them indoors, had only several outdoor workouts before the Navy game and therefore are expected to be improved for the meeting with Georgetown.

Syracuse reportedly has a fine outfield comprised of Cocapts. Ray Pulaski and Charles Holly and Charles (Red) McPhail, a football end. Another gridiron stalwart lending power to the team is Sam Mirabito, big fullback who also is the national intercollegiate heavyweight boxing champion. Mirabito is battling for the catcher's job with Johnny Zurich, Dan Slade and Bob Dollard.

St. John's of Brooklyn, for two years the metropolitan collegiate baseball champion of New York City, will furnish George Washington's improving Colonials one of their toughest assignments of the season. The Johnnies won their first two games, beating C. C. N. Y and Brooklyn College, but have a tough road to follow before they play the Buff and Blue here on the East Ellipse. On a game-a-day schedule, the Johnnies will encounter Duke tomorrow and then, in order, North Carolina State, Wake Forest, Virginia Tech and Hampden-Sydney before their local invasion.

Lapchick Coaches

St. John's, coached by Joe Lapchick, who is more famed as a developer of powerful basketball teams, began the season with a question mark infield. Lapchick declared much of the team's success would depend on how well he could replace the crack second baseshortstop combination of Al DeStepano and Frank Hagerty who were graduated. Both were outstanding players.

To take care of the second base problem Lapchick drafted Capt. Mickey Rutner from left field, and to team with the hard-hitting Rutner from the short field spot he recruited George Milhaven, a varsity utility man in 1940. Rutner, who bats clean-up, compiled a .460 average last year to win the metropolitan New York batting title.

Most of the Johnnies mound duties are handled by George Zitzler, veteran right-hander who won four and lost one last year, and Pete Hanley, a southpaw, who captured all three of his 1940 starts.

West Point Cadets To Present Plaque To N. Y. Giants

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., April 13.—A plaque will be presented the New York Giants on behalf of the Corps of Cadets tomorrow just before the National League club takes the field against Army's baseball team for the twelfth time since they first met in 1914.

The trophy, given as a token of the friendly relations between the Giants and the Cadets, will be presented Bill Terry by Brig. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, superintendent of the military academy. Army never has beaten the Giants, but the Corps of Cadets looks forward to the New Yorkers' annual visit more than any other game, except the annual clash with Navy.

The game will be played on Doubleday Field, named in honor of Abner Doubleday, a cadet at the military academy from 1838 to 1842 and generally credited with having "invented" baseball.

Spillway's Women Stars Match Victors

Bob Davidson's Spillway girls played host to the Recreation Center quintet, of Baltimore, and swamped them in a team match by the score of 1,653 to 1,492 with Jessie Sacrey's splendid 376 high count. Lillian Copeland and Mary Magnotto each totaled 329 with the latter contributing high game for the night of 134. The Baltimore lasses were led by Ida Stallings' and Audrey Mullaney's 124s with the latter getting top set of 348 for her team.

The Baltimore duo of Stallings-Mullaney totaled 646 in the doubles match against but 555 for Magnotto-Bark. Jessie Sacrey took on Marian Lanahan, Baltimore, in the singles and lost by 54 sticks, with 299 to Miss Lanahan's 353. The next match will be rolled in Baltimore at the Recreation drives.

Del Rios Win

Herb Sach's Del Rios had another close call yesterday at Hyattsville Recreation when they were nearly upset by the fast Arcadia quinte! in a special match for the benefit of the Prince Georges County Boys' Club. Trailing almost all the way, the Del Rios came in 31 sticks to the good, totaling 1,745 to the losers' 1,714.

Astor Clarke led the winners with 143-386 with Ernie Hauser contributing a 350. Capt. Fred Murphy totaled 349 for the losers, with George Demeris the biggest help with 148-362. Hokie Smith and Perce Wolfe eked out a victory in the doubles match over Eddie Keith and Fred Murphy by ten sticks, counting 759 to the latter's 749.

All-Stars Victors

In a continuation of the elimination tournament at Brookland Recreation, the Western Electric All-Stars defeated the Letter Carriers' picked team by the score of 1,718 to 1,631, with Dick Lauxman's 142-374 and Cy Hogarth's 371 the deciding factors. Al Gray counted 135-354 and Roy Henry 132-336 for the losers.

Diehl Juniors Win

Keele Leads River Road Golf Sweeps

Jack Keele, Kenwood's hope for District golf stardom this season, led the River Road club members in a Sweepstakes Tournament yesterday with a four-over-par 75. Keele, runner-up in the club championship last year, topped George Vass, jr., the 1940 D. C. schoolboy finalist, by one shot for gross honors.

C. D. Wright won low net honors by four shots with a 90-26, 64. Other net winners were: Harry Sharpe, 76-8, 68; R. Nash, 86-18, 68; Tom Powers, 85-17, 68; Ivan Carson, 89-20, 69; C. M. Dinkins, 81-12, 69; and V. G. Myers, who played twice and won two prizes with identical rounds of 79-10, 69.

BANNOCKBURN

S. S. Fletcher's "Moaners" failed to follow the example of their captain and lost to the "Groaners," 19-17, in the first of the series of intra-club matches at the Bannockburn Club.

Fletcher won 2½ out of a possible three points in a match with Billy Houghton, captain of the Moaners. The losing team picked up the check at the buffet supper.

(Groaners' names first.)

S. S. Fletcher scored 2½ points to ½ for Billy Houghton. S. E. Mulliken and William Samford scored 3 points to 0 for Allen Laing and E. R. Ferguson, jr.; William Pendergast and Roy K. Allen scored 3 points to 0 for Bob Brown and M. B. Shaw; J. Mossberg and M. F. McDonald score 1 point to 2 for George McDonald and Pat Loughran; D. Shuck and T. G. Crawford scored 3 points to 0 for G. E. Getty and E. J. Crill; R. Peed and James A. Hayes scored 1½ points to 1½ for W. E. Welch and A. Cleary; T. H. Brewer and T. E. Capps scored 0 points to 3 for C. Sandberg and J. H. Carpenter; H. L. Dowling and J. A. Salmon scored 3 points to 0 for F. J. Hanrahan and C. Dye; W. C. Brewer and W. C. Whittle scored 0 points to 3 for O. Browne and H. L. Gray; F. P. Piedron and L. E. Massey scored 0 points to 0 for E. Piper and Tom Wargaman; Wayne Smith and A. R. Gordon scored 0 points to 3 for Y. Kinoshita and G. A. Robertson; H. E. Davies and Ed Heard scored 0 points to 3 for T. F. Hayden and Joe Sylvester.

BEAVER DAM

Jim Gipe took up where he left off last season, as low gross scorer in the Beaver Dam Club sweepstakes tournaments. The Federal Government champ posted a two-over par round of 74, yesterday two shots better than Johnny Miller's 76.

Billy Griffin, 15-year-old shotmaker, turned in low net of 84-14, 70, while other net winners were: John Miller, 76-5, 71; S. D. Smith, 84-13, 71; G. Scott, 90-18, 72; Jerry Burch, 83-11, 72; C. D. Hartman, 95-13, 72; G. Abbey, 89-16, 73 and Bill O'Brien, 83-10, 73.

Al Houghton also ran in a Blind Bogey tournament with the following winners: Carl Schmidt, a net 77; G. Hough, 73; S. C. Carroll, 74, and Dr. W. G. Puryear, 75.

MANOR

One of the first par rounds of the year by a Manor Club amateur was posted yesterday by the Manor Moose, Harry G. Pitt, who turned in a regulation figure 70. Ray Moore, Ken Lafferty and Henry Worcester were witnesses.

BRADLEY HILLS

Leonard Morrison turned in a 77-20, 57, to win low net in the blind bogey tourney at Bradley Hills Club, while Bill Bird won low gross honors with a 77 and Edgar Baum high gross with a 95.

The nine-hole layout on Bradley Lane, which will be doubled with the new nine opening around July 1, is operating on a semi-public basis but with 132 members already in the fold. The course will soon be placed on a strictly private arrangement. Rowland Armacost and his assistant, Charles Sullivan, are handling the pro duties.

Pose, Argentine Golfer, Aims For '42 Title

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Ga., April 13.—Martin Pose, the year's hard-luck golfer, is going home to Buenos Aires empty-handed. But two years hence, he believes, the United States Open championship may go with him.

The slender, swarthy Argentine golf professional wound up the winter golf tour a week ago with a shot at the Augusta Masters' crown. In fact, he took so many shots—particularly on the greens—that he finished with 299, a full 19 strokes behind Winner Craig Wood.

But fellow pros, with whom he made the cross-country circuit, aren't selling him short. From tee to green he rates among the best in the game. His bad luck starts when he gets near the pin. And Jimmy Thomson, himself a terrific hitter, calls Pose "the hard-luck golfer of 1941."

Lost Favorite Putter

At the start of the winter tour he lost his putter during a pro-amateur contest near Hollywood, Calif. The club had been his favorite for 12 years, and search of every pro-shop between the Pacific and Atlantic failed to yield one like it. His short game suffered accordingly. Where professionals figure 28 to 31 putts for the average tournament round, Pose was taking 36 and 38. That was the story at Augusta last week, yet he averaged 75 for the four rounds—3 over par. Pose estimates he should have taken no more than 30 putts a round. Lop off 24 strokes from his total score—or even 20 for round numbers—and you have 279 which might have confronted Wood and the others.

"In about ten days," says Pose with a cheerful shrug, "I go home to Buenos Aires. But I come back. I work and save my money until November, 1942. Then I make the winter tour again—and next time I shoot for the U. S. Open Championship.

Schultz, Pirate Scout, Dies in Columbia, S. C.

Columbia, S. C., April 13 (AP).—Joe Schultz, sr., scout for the Pittsburgh Pirates, died today in a Columbia hospital. He entered the hospital a few days ago when he was taken ill enroute to Pittsburgh.

A son, Joe Schultz, jr., catcher on the Pirate team, flew from Wichita, Kans., and was at the bedside when his father died. Mrs. Schultz was here also.

On the Line

CONSIDINE

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT will throw out the first ball of the baseball season for the ninth time today at Griffith Stadium, where the refurbished Yankees meet the Washington Senators. Roosevelt thus becomes the first President of the United States ever to risk coming down with a sore arm from baseball. He has been doing this since 1933, which imperils Walter Johnson's old record for repeat performances here. But there are still some unshot Tories around the village who swear that his control has not improved one whit. The best the Tories have been able to get are bleacher seats, provided they get there when the doors open at 9:30 a. m.

The Stadium has been sold out for weeks. Seemingly every lobbyist and factory representative in town has bought a block of tickets to take a group of those deserving $1 a year men to the game. This is a commendable charity, and should be encouraged like summer camps for underprivileged children. Some of them like Bill Knudsen have been gambling with their money recently. Knudsen is supposed to have gone for this year's salary in a penny ante game the other night. Others are saving their buck, and the general impression of the natives around the town is that these kind are worth every penny of their dollar per annum.

Washington is a seething boom-town on the night before the 1941 baseball opener. There isn't a hotel room to be found in the entire town. It is just as well the Yankees reserved their rooms some months ago, or the whole she-bang would have been turned away at the room-clerk's desk tonight when they arrived. Towns within an area of 50 miles, including Baltimore, are getting in on the shortage-of-rooms boom. The local radios have been issuing hourly bulletins asking the citizens to throw open their rooms to take in visitors.

Must we add that it isn't the opener between the slightly deflated former world champs of baseball, and the rather lowly-held Senators, that has attracted this mob?

Washington is booming, brother, because it is up to its widow's peak in war. Defense plans and the whiff of war has made it the fastest growing town since gold-rush days. It is changing every day, physically and spiritually, just as it changed from a sleepy, shady Southern town in 1917, when the avalanche of war workers came here to typewrite the Kaiser into submission. But this time it is much bigger, and broader and packs more social significance, for Labor and its labor pains are all mixed up with this new rebirth. Sports, tagging along in the wake of this tremendous canker on the hide of an otherwise rather peaceful Nation, is having its own boom. If the Senators manage to stay up anywhere near the first division this year they can make more money than any team in baseball. Not that they are a good or a colorful team, but because the enormous influx of people into Washington has made the city red-hot for a little action.

Washington now is like a small overstuffed town on the eve of its Derby, or its heavyweight title fight, or its first World Series in umpteen years. You feel it around the hotel lobbies and hear it in the new hysteria around the bars. You sense it along the streets and in the big print in the newspaper headlines. The place, like a Louisville or Shelby or Cincinatti on the eve of a big sports event, is gutted with rumor, garrotted with half-truths and sizzles with speculation.

The big event, of course, is the war. Down here it is no longer a case of whether it's coming. The question here is when. And can the champ get in shape in time?

Dempsey always was reported drugged on the eve of a title fight. In Louisville men and women with not enough sense to come in out of a downpour, talk all night before the Derby about the effect of rain on this or that choice. Almost as long as we can remember, Lefty Gomez has had a sore arm on the eve of the series. Down here this sort of thing varies very little.

You can walk through the halls of the Mayflower or Shoreham or Willard Hotels and hear hoarse voices coming from within, men shouting into phones to curse and beg factories to hurry up deliveries of stuff to a Government which will now apparently buy anything that goes "pop." It is like the horde of sports-going souls who never can get enough (or the right kind of) tickets and who spend most of their visit to a major sports event cursing or begging for same.

Washington even has the standard pass line, the inevitable queue of broken down political hacks, starry-eyed specialists, relatives of Congressmen, spavined ward-heelers and career moochers who are here looking for a handout, trying to get fixed up with a soft job when the bomb finally explodes, or looking for a desk job in the Army. The queue looks just like the same one that always waits outside of Mike Jacobs' closed door before a Louis fight, or tags along in the wake of Bill Slocum at the World Series, Frank Menke at the Derby, Dave Woods at the Preakness, or Steve Hannagan at the Indianapolis Speedway. There are even a couple of counterparts of One-Eye Connolly in town.

Louisville stretches banners across the street before the Derby. Washington is festive, too, and this place also is filled with tipsters. The beautiful Japanese cherry blossoms are budding around the Tidal Basin, hard by the Navy Department where brass hats with furrowed foreheads figure out ways of bottling up the Japanese fleet. The tipsters here are the Washington columnists, who know everything before it happens, and issue their Jack's Green Cards at least a day before the big event.

And we thought that the "Greatest Show on Earth" was playing in Madison Square Garden, and that it featured Gargantua!

Perry Favorite In Pinehurst Play

Pinehurst, N. C., April 13 (AP).—Fred Perry, former amateur star, is the favorite in the field of 20-odd players who will compete in the annual Pinehurst professional tennis tournament starting here tomorrow.

Play will last through the week, with the finals in both the singles and doubles falling on Saturday.

Baseball Group For Old-Timers Being Organized

By the Associated Press

Wichita, Kans., April 14.—Organization of a National Old Timers Baseball Association by Ray Dumont, president of the National Semipro Baseball Congress, is under way.

The organization will include chapters in virtually every city and hamlet to perpetuate baseball as the national pastime and especially to encourage more youngsters in sandlot ball.

Dumont explained that granting of local charters would not start until September 1. Minimum age for members will be 50. All expenses will be underwritten by the Semipro Congress.

Bruins Fool Fans, Leave Train Early

Boston, April 13 (AP).—Boston's Bruins, winners of hockey's Stanley Cup, ducked a throng of admirers tonight by alighting from their train at a suburban station.

Worn by their lengthy competition with Toronto and their four-straight victories over Detroit's Red Wings, the Bruins took the easy way to escape a welcome-home reception.

Baseball Now Boasts Goose That Really Lays 'Goose Eggs'

By the United Press

New York, April 13.—Notes from the baseball pressboxes:

Tip to Larry MacPhail: A mechanical goose that really lays "goose eggs" will be added to the scoreboard at Waycross in the Georgia-Florida League this season. The squawking goose ambles across the top of the scoreboard and drops oversized eggs into the slots for the visiting team when it fails to score.

Pitcher Bob Thompson, brother of Gene Thompson, Cincinnati pitcher, is trying to win a place with the Tucson, Arizona-Texas League club.

Berry, Tex., lays claim to the tallest pitcher in organized baseball. Now playing with El Paso in the Arizona-Texas League, Clyde Watkins towers 7 feet.

Manager Billy Southworth of the St. Louis Cardinals has taken a lot of ribbing this spring for using books and charts to rate the qualifications of his squad but Vice President Branch Rickey of the Cardinals apparently has gone Billy one better. Reports say that Rickey recently played chess with a minor league rookie to determine his (the rookie's) mentality.

Since last April 4 when his team played the St. Louis Browns at Fort Smith, Ark., Manager Casey Stengel has been traveling around with the largest squad of "naturals" in Boston baseball history. Arkansas admirers presented Casey with a hive they claimed contained 1,296 bees—the stinging kind.

Vern Freiburger, 17-year-old first baseman recently signed by Cleveland, began his baseball career when he was 12, playing in the Detroit Firemen's Midget League. He was regular first-sacker of the Roose Vanker American Legion Junior League team for the next three years. In 1940, before he was 17, he played first base in the Class A amateur group and also in the Industrial League, batting around .300. He's a left-hand thrower and right-handed batter and has the reputation of being a marvelous fielder.

Billy Herman, of the Chicago Cubs, is the only second baseman in baseball history who has made 11 putouts in one game on two different occasions. It's been done only five times in 65 years of National League play, first by Sam Wise of the old Washington Nationals in 1893, then by Bid McPhee, of the 1894 Reds, and Nap LaJoie, of the Phillies, in 1899. Each of them made 11 putouts only once.

$5,000 Harford Handicap Features Graw Opening Today

8 Sprinters Will Compete In Inaugural

Clyde Tolson Faces Jay Jay, Equistar And Others; Bowie Meet Successful

By Walter Haight

Off to a sizzling start, both in crowds and wagering, Maryland's turf parade moves North to Havre de Grace today for a 12-day meeting, offering four major stake events. The inaugural program puts on the speed clock the first of these fixtures, the $5,000 added Harford Handicap, eagerly sought test of 6 furlongs. This event has drawn eight horses in seven interests and should provide a first-flight battle.

E. K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson, named for the FBI official, is the likely favorite in the field. He has been assigned top weight of 120 pounds and appears ready to carry the impost. There will be many in the anticipated crowd of 10,000 who will let their money talk for them. Howard Bruce's Jay Jay, no stranger to the Haverford, will draw backing. He races few times each year but has always given an excellent account of himself in the big tests.

Derby Hope Runs

One Kentucky Derby eligible will compete against older horses. Big Stakes, owned by Arnold Hanger, will put his legs to the speed test along with Equistar and Court Dance, representing Mrs. Emil Denemark the Brandywine Stable's Madigama, the Tower Stable's Royal Man and R. S. Clark's Trois Pistoles.

In addition to the day's feature, the Parkton Handicap, listed in fifth position on the card and just ahead of the Harford, should prove an interesting race. Little Beans, Belay, Sun Triad and others will clash over the mile-and-a-sixteenth route.

Post time at "The Graw" will be 2:15 p. m., 15 minutes earlier than it was at Bowie. The daily double, conducted on the first and second races, will close at 2 p. m.

Three Other Stakes

In addition to today's Harford, three other big races will be conducted at the meeting. The chief, from a monetary standpoint, is the $15,000 Chesapeake Stakes. This is a 3-year-old race that serves as a brush up of Kentucky Derby candidates and will be staged April 19. Secretry Charles McLennan has 38 eligibles for this battle, but will be satisfied with 10 starters. Among the Derby timber expected to compete are R. S. Clark's Air Marshall, Mrs. Louis Palladino's Little Beans, Mrs. Anthony Pelleteri's Bull Reigh, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Good Turn, E. K. Bryson's Cavalier, Arnold Hanger's Big Stakes, C. S. Howard's Porter's Cap and the Christiana Stable's High Command.

The other two stakes are the 2-year-old Aberdeen Stakes on April 23, in which the Coldstream Stud's consistent Albatross is expected to face a bulky field, and the closing day distance clash for older horses, the Philadelphia Handicap.

Jockey Sterling Young and Apprentice Jockey Darrell Madden, finished in a tie for riding honors during the Bowie meeting, with a dozen winners each. Madden, by riding three to Young's one on closing day, moved into a deadlock with his rival.

Bowie Choices Active

Favorite players clicked with regularity during the meeting, although the average was not up to the 50 per cent mark of the 1940 spring meeting. Public choices took 38 of 88 races, although in a number of instances the winning second choices were only a few cents off the favorites.

Betting at Bowie was $602,394 over last spring. Last year the meeting was one of 12 days compared to 11 this year, but the programs for 1941 were eight races to seven for 1940.

Here's the day-by-day wagering:

Day	1940	1941
First	$305,349	$372,738
Second	212,165	310,265
Third	265,506	307,912
Fourth	253,312	284,877
Fifth	233,049	444,172
Sixth	466,006	369,821
Seventh	210,422	323,921
Eighth	235,885	398,090
Ninth	307,628	324,730
Tenth	284,183	335,550
Eleventh	221,281	467,876
Twelfth	342,772	.....
Total	$3,337,558	$3,939,952

Manager Eats Raw Meat, Takes Team to Church

Thomasville, Ga., April 13 (AP).—Baseball fans trying to size up the new manager of the local club in the Georgia-Florida League, got help today from Sports Writer Albert Riley.

Riley dined with the manager, Bill Rodgers, last night and watched the latter eat raw meat—an uncooked steak.

Baseball King Again as Fans Await Openers

ered judgment of all observers, however, is that at least three teams in each loop are powerful enough to win and that the triangular jostling may continue right down to the last week of the season next fall.

The Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals in the National and the Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers, last year's surprise winners, in the American are the other topnotch teams.

Tuesday's big salvo in the National League will bring together St. Louis at Cincinnati, New York at Brooklyn, Pittsburgh at Chicago and Boston at Philadelphia. The American League will have Chicago at Cleveland, Detroit at St. Louis, Philadelphia at New York and Washington at Boston.

The Cardinals in the last couple of years have finished like a whirlwind, and if they get started swiftly this season might give St. Louis its first pennant since the Gas House Gang won a world title in 1934. The team has a wealth of fine rookie talent, well anchored by such standbys as Johnny Mize and Terry Moore and has a manager, Billy Southworth, who put the Redbirds to zooming when he took over in midseason last year.

The Reds have added a .300 hitting outfielder in Jim Gleason and a former American League pitcher, Monte Pearson, who might easily win 15 games this year if his arm is sound.

The Brooklyn Dodgers were one of the hottest numbers in spring training and have a team much better than the combination which finished second last year. The veteran Paul Waner, for years a star with Pittsburgh, is stationed in rightfield. Pete Reiser, a rookie hitting sensation, is in center. And Ducky Medwick in left looks like he did when he was the most feared batter in the National League and kingpin of the Cardinals. Kirby Higbe, a $100,000 pitcher, and Mickey Owen, a $65,000 catcher, have been added to the battery brigade.

Only the last place Phillies in the National League seem to have gone back—principally through the sale of Higbe and the loss of Hugh Mulcahy in the Army draft.

This last factor, the draft, furnishes one of the most uncertain aspects to the pennant picture, particularly in the American League. The chances of Detroit retaining its championship are wrapped up in Hank Greenberg, most valuable player in the league and highest salaried player in baseball. His big bat carried the Tigers into the throne room last season, but he has been classified A-1 by his draft board in spite of a recommendation for a deferment by a Florida physician who found he had flat feet.

Hank Makes Tigers

With Greenberg on duty, the Tigers are as strong as last year, but without him they are just another good ball club. This is one of the reasons for the switch in sentiment to the Yanks and Indians.

The Tribe has obtained two good relief pitchers, Clint Brown and Joe Heving, and a hard-hitting outfielder, Gee Walker, besides closing the book on internal ructions with a new manager, Roger Peckinpaugh, who ran the club for five and a half seasons from 1928 to 1933.

It is not a powerhouse like the Tigers or Yanks, but has better pitching, fronted by Bob Feller, the outstanding hurler of recent years, and an airtight defensive combination. Ken Keltner, the third baseman who had a bad year in 1940, is hitting and fielding like a champion again.

The case for the Yankees is based chiefly on expectations of an improved infield and comebacks by such veterans as Bill Dickey, Rob Rolfe and Red Ruffing, all of whom had bad seasons in 1940. The infusion of new blood comes chiefly in Shortstop Phil Rizzuto and Second Baseman Gerry Priddy, who have played together for three seasons on Yankee farms and last year at Kansas City easily were the best keystone combination in the minors.

The Boston Red Sox did some house cleaning during the winter and acquired a first-class catcher in Frank Pytlak, but on the whole does not look as strong as last year. One of the doubtful spots is shortstop, where Manager Joe Cronin himself holds forth. It's a busy thoroughfare for an aging traffic cop.

The St. Louis Browns are improved, with added depth in their pitching staff, but are unlikely to catch the Chicago White Sox, who shape up about the same as last year. The Philadelphia Athletics also are better and may get out of the cellar at the expense of the Washington Senators, who have only three worthy starting pitchers and expect to give up Third Baseman Buddy Lewis to the Army next month.

Prize Lists Out for D. C. Horse Show

Miss Deborah G. Rood, managing director of the Washington Horse Show, announced that prize lists yesterday had been sent out to approximately 1,000 prospective exhibitors in the South and East for the annual classic to take place May 16-17-18 at Meadowbrook Saddle Club just off the East-West Highway.

In the 19-page pamphlet sent the exhibitors is contained the biggest prize list in history. This list, Miss Rood stated, will prevail for the Wilmington (Del.) Horse Show scheduled May 22-23-24 and the Devon, Pa., event May 26-31 inclusive.

There are 49 events scheduled in the junior, conformation hunter, working hunter, open jumper and military divisions. Entries will close Wednesday, April 30.

H. Rozier Dulany, jr., president of the Washington Horse Show, announced that an important meeting of the Horse Show board and representatives of the Junior League, sponors of the event, will be held next Friday, April 18, at 4 p. m. at Meadowbrook Club. At that time Managing Director Rood will outline her plans for bringing in the top-notch hunters and jumpers in this section.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., and Miss Cecil Lester Jones will represent the Junior League this season. There will be a special accent on youth, for the prize list shows an elaborate lineup of events for the juniors. There will be more prizes for juniors than ever before.

The official list of well-known horse leaders who will serve in various capacities during the three-day show was announced as follows yesterday by Dulany:

Stewards: Charles A. Lea, F. Moran McConihe, Hubbert R. Quinter.

Assistant secretaries: Mrs. Ella M. Nickol and Mrs. E. Gardner Hallman.

Judges: Junior division, Mrs. Dean Bedford, Fallston, Md.; Hunter Division, Rufus Finch, Rumson, N. J.; George B. Elliott, Toronto and Robert B. Young, Middleburg, Va.

Open Jumper scorers: Col. Edwin N. Hardy, United States Army, and George P. Plummer, Potomac, Md.

Official veterinarian: Lt. Co. John W. Miner, Fort Myer, Va.

Official announcer: Otis Trowbridge, Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Selections at Havre de Grace.

Dear Al:

After Saturday's $5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap I'm beginning to wonder if there isn't a clause in the by-laws of the Jockeys' Guild which prohibits claiming a foul against Johnny Gilbert. I picked Ringle to win and he won. Anybody who saw that get-ready sprint of Ringle's knew the handwriting was on the wall for the big race. However, Gilbert messed up horses in winning it. The chartcallers were amazed when the other riders failed to register any objection. Ringle came around the outside of the field entering the stretch. Honey Cloud came over on him and Ringle bumped him right back. Through the stretch, Ringle began lugging in and he was crossing the field approaching the finish. Honey Cloud got knocked out of it and Son Altesse had little or no chance to get through with Ringle running almost sideways. The stewards probably were waiting for a boy to register a complaint, because they held up lighting the official sign for more than two minutes after the boys had weighed in. Don't think I'm trying to talk myself out of a winner, although, as far as most of the selectors at the Bowie meeting were concerned. I didn't need one to top them. But I'm still wondering why a foul wasn't claimed. Jockey Henri Mora, who was not given the Honey Cloud mount after the Abel veteran was beaten in his previous start, said that he would beat Honey Cloud Saturday with Advocator. Honey Cloud finished ahead of Advocator, but Honey Cloud's effort in trying to keep up with Advocator in the early stages was a factor in his defeat. They tell me that Sonny Workman and Alfred Vanderbilt failed to come to terms on a contract and that Gilbert will do the riding for the cerise and white stable this year. After a solid week of sunshine, General Manager Joseph Farrell lived up to his nickname of "Good Weather" Farrell. As soon as they clear up Bowie business, Farrell and Alton Jump, treasurer of the association, will begin work on the Marlboro meeting. Here's some horses that appear ready to win: Drift Along, Tyr, Pomiva, Creepy Mouse, Fogoso, Smart Crack, The General. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Mad Bunny raced in California and organized her racing legs. She has worked well since transferring to the East, and this looks like the right spot for a coming out party. Sis Baker, off Bowie racing, deserves attention. Miss I. Q. wintered in Florida and should be in the thick of contention.

Second race—Easter Holiday has been threatening to win a race of this kind. I understand that Johnny Gilbert will do the riding today. If so, I've got to string along. Boston Pal went wrong on the West Coast. However, this one worked encouragingly at Bowie and could be ready. Playmore will have a chance if "Dynamite" Kerr switches riders.

Third race—Sturdy Duke turned in a good effort in better company last out and comes from a barn full of fit ones. This will be his sixth try of the year for a purse, and I believe he will take it. Nilon was sharpened for this in a spirit race and will be right there. Army Banners was a Bowie winner.

Fourth race—Barrymore stumbled when whipped by Fair Hero at Bowie, but came back with 122 pounds and downed good company. He gets in light for this, and I see no reason for mistakes. Fair Hero is as good as that Bowie effort and will be in the thick of contention. Light Of Morn has speed galore but is chicken hearted.

Fifth race—Little Beans was a star over this track last year and gave evidence of his condition by that sparkling Florida race. Gets a modest weight assignment and I'm going to string along. Belay has been working in fine fashion and should be prominent in his debut. Son Altesse was blocked in the stretch last Saturday. If sent back, he will be a keen factor.

Sixth race—Clyde Tolson, despite the top weight assignment of 120 pounds, figured to supply the stretch punch to down this feature field. Jay Jay is brushed up for an occasional good sprint. The small field may serve to keep him out of trouble and he will be dangerous over a track he likes. The Denemark entry of Equistar and Court Dance may account for the show money.

Seventh race—Black Grouse has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in this field. He has done everything asked and needs only to run his race. Memory Book, with those ailing pins, is hard to guess. May rally and he may not. Annikin is a possible surprise.

Eighth race—Oversight looms as the right one in the day's finale. Conditions suit his purposes. White Sand may be along in time to be a dangerous stretch factor. Briar Sharp to take care of the minor award.

Best bet—Black Grouse.

King Cole Gives 'Fitz' Double Bid for Derby

Colt's Performance at Jamaica Boosts Stock; Bold Irishman Other Hope

By the United Press

New York, April 13.—The slightly stooped figure of Jim Fitzsimmons cast an ominous shadow over the Kentucky Derby tonight as the railbirds suddenly took notice that the old Easterner is ready with another double-barreled bid for the blue grass bauble he already has won three times.

In the 50 years he has followed the races, Sunny Jim has had more than his share of good horses. Gallant Fox, Omaha and Johnstown won the Derby; Granville, Merry Pete and Fighting Fox lost it. Now there are a couple of new young ones coming up and nobody is sure just which is the better.

The first is King Cole, a rugged speed horse with a royal disdain of anything on four legs. The second is a tall fellow named Bold Irishman, who hasn't been seen in a race yet this year. They comprise the strongest entry in the 1941 Derby book and each day that passes finds their future odds dropping.

Scored Saturday

King Cole, a husky son of Pharamond II, sports the solid black silks of Ogden Phipps. He furnished the big turf news of the weekend when he brought Sunny Jim his fourth straight triumph in the Paumonok Handicap at Jamaica and took another long leap down the trail Johnstown followed to the Derby two years ago.

It wasn't so much what the King did as the way he did it. Giving away weight on the scale to 10 opponents, he jumped to a length lead in a dozen strides, took full command at the quarter and then loafed home by a three-and-a-half-length margin with his jockey standing up in the irons. The time was 1:11 4-5—and could have been a second faster.

The surprise showing justified again the theory that in the spring the man to watch is Fitzsimmons but it weakened another theory—that King Cole can't go a distance. The route of the Paumonok was just 6 furlongs, but on the basis of his easy gallop at the finish King Cole might just as well have kept on running all evening.

Odds Sure to Drop

The performance, most impressive shown by an Eastern Derby hope this season, is certain to drop the King's future odds below the 10-1 now quoted. And since he and Bold Irishman will break from the Derby gate as a coupling in the mutuels, they stand tonight as easily the best bet in the field until something a good deal better comes along.

Bold Irishman, who is owned by Mrs. H. C. Phipps, is supposed to be a dark-horse, but you can take Sunny Jim's word that he is anything but. While King Cole's times have been a trifle faster, the workouts of the Irishman have been growing steadily stronger—and longer. He is down to 8-1 in the future book, although he hasn't started since last November.

Both of the colts will start once more before entering the ancient Derby in the $20,000 Wood Memorial, on April 26. If they both still look strong by then they may go in different races, so that no one can tell which is the better until they reach the Derby and settle the question where it can be settled best.

inning. Al Smith took the mound in the sixth and held the New Yorkers to three hits in six more frames.

Trailing, 4-1, going into the ninth, the Indians tied the score when Roy Bell smacked a home run behind Gerald Walker's single, and then singles by Ray Mack and Roy Weatherly, coupled with a pass and a force-out, brought in another tally. The Indians lost their chance to win when Lou Boudreau hit into a double play with the bases full.

The game was the fifth tie the Giants and Indians have played in their eight seasons of spring rivalry. Cleveland won this year's series, 9-3, and leads over the long stretch, 50 to 47.

Chisox Nose Out Cubs

Chicago, April 13 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox hopped on Dizzy Dean, Larry French and Bill Lee for ten hits and a 3-to-2 victory over the Cubs today in the final dress rehearsal for both teams before the season openers Tuesday.

The Cubs got both their runs off the veteran Ted Lyons, who pitched five innings. Jack Hallett then held the National Leaguers hitless in the last four frames.

The Cubs won the spring series with their crosstown rivals anyway, taking 8 of 14 games.

Browns Win, 6 to 5

St. Louis, April 13 (AP).—All those stories you've been hearing about the revived St. Louis Browns were not without foundation.

To prove it the Brownies today added a 6-to-5 decision to the 8-to-2 defeat they pinned on the vitamin-fed Cardinals yesterday to mop up the annual city series and set grand stand tongues to wagging "its first division sure this year."

It was the breaks, however, that nudged the Browns over the line this afternoon. With the score tied in the seventh inning, Max Lanier, the fourth of six Cardinal pitchers, forced over the deciding tally by walking two batters after Harlond Clift and Rip Radcliff had singled.

Thirty-three thousand fans will be in the park at game time, Stadium officials indicated. Grand stand and box seats have long since been exhausted and remaining bleacher seats, still on sail, are rapidly vanishing. Fifteen hundred standing room tickets will be placed on sale at the stadium at 2:15 p. m.

"Cloudy and continued warm."

Washington drew a choice attraction for its opener. Capital fans will be the first to glimpse the new Yankee outfield in action. The Yankees will take the field as the team favored to win the pennant.

Chevy Chase Jumper Title To Enterprise

By Anne Hagner

Working harder than a draft horse for her championship award, Capt. David Wagstaff's Enterprise leaped 6 feet yesterday in the knockdown-and-out event of the Chevy Chase Horse Show to win the blue and, ultimately, the open jumping tri-color before 1,000 spectators at the East-West highway show grounds. Mrs. Altemus Whitney's Bon Nuit was reserve champion.

Wagstaff's long, rangy chestnut mare, who has practically been on vacation from jumping fences since the President's Birthday show at Fort Myer last January, almost met her match in the Sligo Riding School's Cody, ridden by University of Maryland student Bill Stevens, who finally hit the 6-foot bar on the fifth jump-off.

The final awards were pinned after one of the stiffest open jumping battles to be seen locally in a long time as the two horses tied repeatedly at 5 and 5½ feet before Capt. Wagstaff's English-bred mare went clean at her first attempt at the 6-foot mark.

Smacko Wins

Earlier in the day, Enterprise had the tables turned on her by her friendly rival of long standing, Capt. Charles McClelland's Smacko, who defeated her by one-fifth of a second to win the handy jumpers event, judged on the basis of time and faults. The last time the pair met in a similar class was at Madison Square Garden, when Enterprise took the hotly contested Bowman Challenge Cup from Smacko by—you guessed it—one-fifth of a second.

The hunter championship was an almost effortless achievement for U. S. Randle' brilliant 5-year-old, Gee Ray Bee, making his first important bid of the season for conformation honors. With his owner and Frost Anderson alternating in the saddle, the big colt won the green and open hunters' events to outpoint Mrs. Altemus Whitney's Cherry Bounce, reserve winner.

Nanette Is Upset

The two chestnut geldings took turns defeating each other during the afternoon, with Cherry Bounce getting the nod over his larger opponent in the road hacks and Gee Ray Bee doing likewise in the green class.. The surprise came, however, when Charles Fletcher's Nanette triumphed over both championship candidates in the ladies' hunters competition, when she turned in a faultless performance with Margaret Cotter aboard.

Second and third, with Miss Cotter again doing the honors, were Gee Ray Bee and Cherry Bounce in that order. Ellie Leh took fourth with the Whitney-owned Faithful Heart.

The Whitney horses hung up another victory as Bon Nuit, big jumping gray stallion, took the touch-and-out over Betty Lamborn on Meddler, from the National Park College. Roland Ridgeway had the mount on the winner, who took the reserve championship award by virtue of his blue ribbon and several minor awards.

Mrs. Whitney's big thoroughbred, incidentally, managed to even the score with his high-minded stablemate, First Night, who came out of the nowhere to top him in open classes at several shows earlier this year. Yesterday First Night, with Norman Haymaker up, just missed the ribbon-winning brackets, while Bon Nuit seemed to hit his 1940 stride.

Two Pitchers in No-Hit Game, One Loses, 1-0

Allen, Mich., April 13 (AP).—Something had to give when Arthur Kinney, of Allen High School, and Jim Maloney, of Osseo High, hooked up in a pitching duel in the county league's opening game.

Kinney allowed no hits and fanned 15 men. Maloney likewise gave no hits and faned 12. But Kinney had errorless support, while Maloney's mates erred twice. Result: Kinney himself reached base on a walk in the second inning and ultimately scored on an error to given Allen a 1-to-0 win.

Nashville 'Noses Out' Chattanooga, 25 to 1

Chattanooga, Ten., April 13 (AP).—Nashville, Southern Association pennant winner last year, went on a batting spree in its fourth game of the new season, smothering Chattanooga, 25 to 1, in the second game of a double-header today.

The Vols scored 15 times in the seventh and last inning. They won the first game, 7 to 2.

General Wage Boost for Steel Workers Seen

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 13.—The wage and price situation in the steel industry will come to a head soon, the magazine Steel predicts today, and "since one prominent independent has raised wages 10 cents per hour it is believed that the entire industry must follow."

"Whether such action would bring about higher base prices remains to be seen," the review says, explaining:

To produce a ton of sheet steel requires 33 man-hours. Assuming the wage increase to be a flat 10 cents, this alone would increase the cost of making a ton of sheets $3.30. A ton of pipe requires 37 man-hours, a ton of shapes or plates takes 16 man-hours, and a ton of tin plate 52 man-hours.

Fair Return Not Seen

"The steel industry's recent earnings . . . are not sufficient to absorb the added labor and other costs now in sight and leave anything like a fair return to investors," the trade paper states. The 10-cents-an-hour increase on 1940 pay rolls would have cost $154,000,000, compared with $258,000,000 net profit for the 23 leading producers representing more than 90 per cent of ingot capacity.

"Consumers are still being taken care of as to supplies. Some finished steel consumers have been compelled to slow down operations somewhat.

"A general priority system for producers and warehouse distributors of nickel-bearing steel has been adopted by the Office of Production Management. Controls are more intricate than on any other priority item.

New Orders Lighter

"Generally new business for both mills and warehouses is in lighter volume, which is decidedly welcome." Theoretical selling into the first quarter of 1942 has begun.

The national steel production rate last week was unchanged at 98 per cent. Steel production advanced in the Cleveland area by 2½ points to 98½ per cent of capacity, Buffalo 2 points to 90½, Cincinnati ½ to 94. Declines included Detroit 13 points to 61 and New England 2 to 90. Unchanged were Pittsburgh 102, Chicago 101½, Eastern Pennsylvania 96, Wheeling 88, Birmingham 90, St. Louis 98 and Youngstown 97.

"Steel's" steelworks scrap composite was unchanged at $19.16, the revised figure for the preceding week.

U.S. Opposes 'New Pharoah,' Barkley Tells Jewish Group

New York, April 13 (AP).—United States Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley told a banquet of the National Labor Committee for Palestine tonight that the American people are determined that "a new Pharoah who has arisen shall not enslave mankind."

Barkley indorsed the committee's efforts to promote the welfare of Jews seeking to build a Jewish national life in Palestine, and viewed Moses and his teachings as symbols of "human freedom" for all races.

"The laws of Moses were the first 'new deal,'" he said.

Isaac Hamlin, secretary of the committee, announced that $100,000 had been raised for the Palestine project through a campaign climaxed by the banquet.

The following message from President Roosevelt was read:

"I trust this celebration will inspire all who participate with a new determination to exemplify in twentieth century terms the highest teachings of the ancient culture of Israel."

10 Cities Named For Community Health Services

Ten cities were selected by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the American Public Health Association yesterday as having provided the most effective community-wide health protection for their residents during 1940. They are:

Baltimore, Md.; Evanston, Ill.; Greenwich, Conn.; Hackensack, N. J.; Hartford, Conn.; Honolulu, Hawaii; Madison, Wis.; Memphis, Tenn.; Newton, Mass., and Pasadena, Calif.

Hartford, Conn., and Newton, Mass., were chosen as the two cities which conducted the most effective tuberculosis control programs.

Justice Murphy Marks His 48th Birthday

Justice Frank Murphy, newest member of the Supreme Court, became 48 years old yesterday.

The bachelor jurist took his seat on February 5, 1940, after serving a year as Attorney General.

Previously he had been Mayor of Detroit, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, and Governor of Michigan.

Just Didn't Get Off Boat

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

EDWARD JAN FINDER, 12, arrived at San Francisco aboard the liner President Taft to create a knotty problem for immigration authorities. A native of Poland, he said he "got on the boat at Kobe, Japan, to mail a letter and just didn't get off." His mother, Mrs. Emmy Finder, of New York, waited on the dock with a passport for him and bond for his admission to the U. S., but lacked necessary visa. The boy was being held at the immigration station pending a hearing.

Draft Office Defines Data Open to Inquiry

Information concerning registrants for Selective Service is a matter of public record and "is available to anyone making a legitimate inquiry," provided it is not specifically defined as confidential in regulations, National Selective Service headquarters said yesterday.

Nonconfidential data, headquarters added, is available provided its production or dissemination does not interfere with the orderly functioning of the Selective Service machinery. All local and State boards are expected, it was said, to conform with the policy.

Confidential information was defined as records pertaining to the physical condition of a registrant, answers to the questionnaire under the subject "dependency" (except names and addresses and dependents), and data on previous military service. The fact that a claim for deferment has been made on grounds of physical disability or dependency is not confidential.

"All other records," regulations say, "shall be available for public information, provided inquiries do not interfere with the dispatch of business."

No one except authorized officials may be permitted to search or handle records, this being the duty of the custodian upon request. It was pointed out that final classification of registrants who appeal to boards is part of the nonconfidential record.

American Lines Add Air Service To South America

Counteracting German-Italian air penetration in Latin America, Pan American Airways and Pan American Grace Airways yesterday put into effect new high-speed schedules linking all 21 Western Hemisphere requlics on an eight-day, 15,000-mile air circuit between Washington and Buenos Aires.

Pan American Grace Airways, according to schedules filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board, will launch a third weekly service down the west coast of South America to Santiago, the Chilean capital, providing a three-day service for United States mail, passengers and express through to Chile.

Covering part of the territory formerly operated by the German Lufthansa, whose planes were grounded as a precautionary measure by the Chilean government when crews attempted to scuttle German freighters in Callao, Pan American Grace schedules will effect a one-third increase in American-flag services over this section of South America's west coast.

Hospital Ship Survivors Tell How Nazis Riddled Wounded

By the Associated Press

Athens, April 13.—Survivors of the Greek hospital ship Attiki, which the Greeks reported was sunk by German bombers, reached Athens today with stories that German planes machine-gunned the nurses and wounded as they attempted to leave the sinking vessel.

(Sinking of the 2,561-ton ship was reported yesterday but the location was not given.)

Mrs. Ephi Demopoulos, a Red Cross nurse who was in the water in a lifebelt for eight hours before being picked up by a destroyer, gave this account:

"Our ship was plainly lighted by two searchlights on its Red Cross markings when it was attacked by German stukas about 11:30 p. m.

"In the first attack two bombs struck the prow of the ship. We rushed on deck. Overhead we could hear the roar of planes. The ship already was listing.

"We immediately started transferring the wounded to boats. The ship had stopped.

"As we started to lower the boats, a German plane sweeping just over the mast dropped more bombs. One struck the stern and the Attiki began settling very fast.

"Another German plane swept over the ship, machine gunning the decks and swimmers in the water. Some bullets cut the rope on one lifeboat being lowered, dumping the wounded and nurses into the sea.

"There were not enough boats for everyone, and we jumped into the sea and clung to rafts while the planes continued to machine gun us.

"Capt. Dimitri Meletopoulos, who is in his sixties, was wonderful. He directed the crew and nurses in abandoning ship and did not leave until the last man was off. Then he jumped into the water and swam around, keeping together those floating in lifebelts so they could help each other. I missed him about dawn and did not see him again."

Other survivors said the body of the captain was found later. He apparently died of a heart attack brought on by overexertion.

U. of Va. Plans Jefferson Birthday Rites

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., April 13.—The 198th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson passed without celebration today either at Monticello, his home, or at the University of Virginia, which he founded, but both of these places will be the scenes of commemorative exercises tomorrow.

Pierre De Lanux, French author and journalist, will speak at the University of Virginia in the morning and at Monticello in the afternoon, during exercises which were put off one day to avoid any conflict with Easter observances in churches.

All day long a stream of visitors, many from other States, streamed up the side of the "little mountain" and through the mansion which Jefferson built to be his home. Tomorrow Monticello will be open to the public without any admission charge. This is the first time this has been done by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

Founder's Day exercises at the University will be held in Cabell Hall tomorrow at 11 a. m., and will be preceded by an academic procession on the lawn.

Memorial wreaths will be laid on the grave of Jefferson tomorrow afternoon before M. De Lanux's second address. A wreath sent by President Roosevelt will be placed by Col. E. R. Warner McCabe, the new superintendent of Staunton Military Academy.

Plans are already under way locally for a bicentennial anniversary of Jefferson's birth on April 13, 1943.

Frederick Starts Road Repairing

Frederick, Md., April 13 (AP).—County Engineer Roger H. Willard, saying that Frederick County roads suffered serious winter damage, announced the start of an extensive patching and oiling schedule.

Damage to the county roads is in direct contrast with that experienced by State roads commission officials who have found little deterioration throughout most of the State.

Willard said roads built three or four years ago have been seriously damaged and many will have to be resurfaced. He reported the roads board is anticipating an expensive maintenance program for the current year.

Three patching gangs were at work last week and seven more repair crews will begin this week.

Willard said four construction projects are in progress. Two major contracts—the Kemptown-Barthoiows Highway and the Johnsville-Simpsonville Mill Highway—which have been idle during the winter, will be completed within a month, according to Willard. WPA labor is being used wherever available.

Pupils to See Play In Montgomery

"Montgomery County school children will have a theater party during the Easter vacation. "The Emperor's Treasure Chest," a mystery comedy of South America, will be enacted by adult professional artists next Saturday at 2 p. m. in the auditorium of Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School, Philadelphia and Chicago Avenues.

This is the last of a series of four entertainments brought to the county this year under the sponsorship of several Montgomery County schools. Production of this play, written by Cecile Matschat, Literary Guild author, was part of a Pan-American goodwill educational program announced at the National Educational Association convention.

North Ridge Citizens To Plan Soldier Aid

The Rev. William Basom has been appointed chairman of the North Ridge Citizens Association's special committee to report on methods of cooperating with the Northern Virginia Regional Defense Council in providing recreational facilities for soldiers visiting Alexandria.

Assisting the Rev. Mr. Basom are Mrs. Kamp Charles, Mrs. H. C. Bruton, Mrs. C. F. Sarle, Mrs. Glenn Richard.

9,000 Camp Lee Troops Jam Roads on Leave

Camp Lee, Va., April 13 (AP).—Approximately 9,000 of the 21,300 troops stationed at Camp Lee were granted leaves to spend the Easter holidays at their homes.

The exodus jammed highways, trains and buses in the Petersburg section, already crowded by the usual heavy holiday travel. Many of the soldiers received permission to remain away until Tuesday.

Rep. Patrick to Speak At Democrats' Dinner

Representative Luther Patrick, of Alabama, will be guest speaker at a Jefferson Day dinner of the 13-1 Democratic Club tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. at the Indian Spring Golf Club, Colesville Road, Silver Spring, Md.

Bids and Proposals

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, April 9, 1941. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509, District Building, until 2:00 P. M., April 22, 1941, and then publicly opened for construction of storm-water conduits: (1) approximately 3,485 feet of 15-inch to 24-inch diameter conduits in the Easterly section, and (2) approximately 1,785 feet of 15-inch to 24-inch diameter conduits in the Northwesterly section, of the District of Columbia. Proposals may be examined and secured at the Office of the Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building.

Federal Works Agency, Public Buildings Administration, Washington, D. C., April 11, 1941.—Sealed proposals in duplicate will be publicly opened in this office at 1 p. m., Standard Time, April 25, 1941, for construction of the FCC Radio Monitoring Station, Laurel, Md. Upon application, one set of drawings and specifications will be supplied free to each general contractor interested in submitting a proposal. The above drawings and specifications MUST be returned to this office. Contractors requiring additional sets may obtain them by purchase from this office at a cost of $5 per set, which will not be returned. Checks offered as payment for drawings and specifications must be made payable to the order of the Treasurer, U. S. Drawings and specifications will not be furnished to contractors who have consistently failed to submit proposals. One set upon request, and when considered in the interests of the Government, will be furnished, in the discretion of the Commissioner, to builders' exchanges, chambers of commerce or other organizations who will guarantee to make them available for any sub-contractor or material firm interested, and to quantity surveyors, but this privilege will be withdrawn if the sets are not returned after they have accomplished their purpose. W. E. REYNOLDS, Commissioner of Public Buildings, Federal Works Agency.

SUPERMAN — Guardian Angel — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

MEANWHILE—EDITORIAL OFFICE OF THE DAILY PLANET....
BUT I THOUGHT THIS ASSIGNMENT WOULD INTEREST YOU, CLARK.
SORRY, CHIEF, I'D LIKE TO TAKE IT, BUT I MUST FINISH SEVERAL OTHER STORIES FIRST.
YOU COULDN'T BE TURNING IT DOWN, CLARK, BECAUSE THE ASSIGNMENT WOULD TAKE YOU INTO THE TOUGHEST PART OF TOWN!
I WANT THAT ASSIGNMENT, CHIEF....CAN I HAVE IT?
SURE 'NOUGH—HERE'S A LETTER FROM A WOMAN WHO SAYS HER HUSBAND MISTREATS HER. I'D LIKE YOU TO INVESTIGATE.
AWAY FROM THE OTHERS, CLARK SWIFTLY DONS HIS SUPERMAN COSTUME....
I HATE PLAYING THE COWARD—BUT NO ONE MUST EVER SUSPECT MY TRUE IDENTITY!
THEN HE SPRINGS INTO SPACE....
GOT TO KEEP AN EYE ON LOIS. SHE MAY NEED MY HELP!

JOE PALOOKA — Do It! — BY HAM FISHER

WINNIE WINKLE — Somnolent Insomnia — BY BRANNER

GOSH, I FEEL MISERABLE! I'M SUFFERIN' SOMETHIN' AWFUL FROM INSOMNIA!
IT'S FUNNY HOW YOU'RE SUDDENLY GETTIN' ALL KINDS OF AILMENTS SINCE WINNIE'S COME HOME!
JEE' TH'SAME I FEEL TOO BAD TO GO TO WORK! I AIN'T SLEPT A WINK ALL NIGHT!
BUT, FATHER, WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF YOU STAYED HOME FROM WORK TODAY?
SLEEP!

MR. AND MRS. — A Gentle Hint — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

HELLO! CARNATIONS? THEY LOOK FINE
DON'T THEY!
(THE NEXT DAY)
THOSE CARNATIONS ARE KEEPING REAL WELL, AREN'T THEY!
I THREW OUT THE WILTED ONES
FLOWERS BEGIN TO LOOK PRETTY CRUMMY
YES, BUT THEY'RE THE ONLY FLOWERS I'VE GOT
(AND ONE MORE)
SAY, HOW LONG ARE YOU GOING TO HANG ON TO THESE ANTIQUES?
MAYBE UNTIL YOU BUY ME SOME FRESH ONES. I BOUGHT THESE MYSELF

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

JANE ARDEN — Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. — A Banging Door — BY MONTE BARRETT AND RUSSELL ROSS

YOU'RE A BRICK FOR STAYING HERE WITH ME—I'LL ADMIT I'M SORT OF SCARED!
NONSENSE! YOUR UNCLE LIVED HERE FOR YEARS—AND NOTHING EVER HAPPENED TO HIM—
SLAM
A DOOR BANGING—HM—I DON'T UNDERSTAND THAT—
MAYBE IT'S CHOLLY SING—
MAYBE—
COME ON—WE'LL SEE!

Today is Pan-American Day throughout the Western Hemisphere and, as part of its observance, Edwin C. Hill is to devote his broadcast, "The Human Side of the News"—at 6 p. m. over WJSV—to telling you something about it.

At the invitation of the Pan American Union, Hill is doing the broadcast from the Governing Board Room of the Pan American Building here in Washington. He'll be the guest of Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Union, and Francisco J. Hernandez, chief of the organization's travel bureau.

That Hill's story will be good is a foregone conclusion. He's been a radio favorite ever since 1931 and before that he was known as one of the world's best newspapermen. When he was the star reporter for the New York Sun, it was he who wrote the vivid stories about the sinking of the Titanic, the General Slocum steamboat disaster, the shooting of Stanford White by Harry Thaw. It was he who when covering the Republican Convention in 1920 in Chicago scooped the world on the nomination of Warren G. Harding—incidentally coining the now much used phrase, "In a smoke-filled room."

Although he's now in his 50's, Hill tackles a story with just as much enthusiasm as he did when he was a youngster in his 20's, which presumably is why he's a success story himself.

Three Rescued In Leap From Burning Boat

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Md., April 13.—Three Cambridge sailors were rescued today from the waters at the mouth of the Choptank River an hour after being forced to jump from their flaming 45-foot schooner J. M. Tolley.

After unsuccessfully attempting to quench a fire which broke out shortly after noon, Capt. Harry Newcomb and Crewmen Jack Arron and Robert Hurley spent futile minutes working to launch their skiff.

Burned by the hot deck of the little vessel, the men had to abandon the boat and skiff and leap into the water. They were picked up off Hills Point by the Phillips Packing Co. boat, Pop-Eye, en route to Cambridge from Richmond, Va., under Capt. Calvin Adams.

The Pop-Eye brought them to Cambridge, where they were taken to the hospital. Capt. Adams said all three were suffering from exposure and from burns that were "painful but not serious."

Shortly after the rescue, the yacht Lotus, of Cambridge, succeeded in getting a tow line on the J. M. Tolley and beaching her at Martins Point. Three firemen from Trappe, Easton and Oxford took hoses in rowboats to the still-burning ship.

As they reached her, an oil tank exploded, blowing debris into the air. None of the firemen, who finally quenched the blaze after it had destroyed the interior of the vessel, was injured.

Dr. Corbett Says Cooperatives Must Cooperate

College Park, Md., April 13 (AP).—Dr. Roger B. Corbett, director of the University of Maryland experiment station, said today that one of the greatest problems facing cooperatives is that of cooperating among themselves.

Corbett said in a statement that the leader who lacks the vision to get along with other cooperative organizations harms his own group and the entire movement.

In some fields, particularly in legislation and education, Corbett finds that cooperatives are learning to work together. One of the best developments, he said, is the growth of regional organizations to bind together scattered groups.

He said leaders should look on cooperatives not only as a "hard-boiled business proposition," but as possible means to greater ends.

Contract Bridge

Ingenuity and foresight are as important in the play of a hand as in the bidding. South displayed top-scoring resourcefulness in his management of the hand in today's box when he succeeded in making his contract of three no trump, doubled. West opened the spade queen, which was permitted to win, and continued the jack. How would you develop the hand from this point? Declarer's method is presented below.

Today's Hand

SOUTH DEALER

	♠ 5 ♡ Q J 7 6 2 ◇ A 10 4 ♣ J 10 8 2
♠ Q J 10 9 8 ♡ A 10 9 8 ◇ 8 7 ♣ A 6	WEST	NORTH ♠ 6 4 3 ♡ 5 4 ◇ J 9 6 5 3 ♣ 9 7 5 EAST SOUTH ♠ A K 7 2 ♡ K 3 ◇ K Q 2 ♣ K Q 4 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Dble	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Q ♠.

Declarer wins his contract by slipping a trick in hearts through the defense. After taking the second round of spades, South can count only eight tricks—three diamonds, two spades and three clubs—if he drives out the club ace at once. If he attempts to establish the hearts instead of the clubs they undoubtedly will not break and he will still have to play the clubs for a ninth trick.

As South knows West holds both aces for his double, he realizes he is doomed to failure; for West will have his spade suit established before declarer can develop his nine tricks.

An ingenious play comes to his rescue; if he leads a low heart, instead of the king as usual, West is up against it. If West hops on with the ace, the heart suit is established in spite of the bad break and declarer can run home with three no trump. If West ducks, as occurred in the actual case, declarer will bag the heart queen and abandon the suit in favor of clubs.

Weather Conditions

U. S. Dept. of Commerce, Weather Bureau. Washington, April 13, 7:30 p. m.

Forecasts

For Maryland—Mostly cloudy and continued warm Monday; Tuesday mostly cloudy, scattered showers in west portion; little change in temperature.

Conditions

The relatively slow movements on the weather map during the last few days have persisted in the last 24 hours although a slight acceleration of the movement is now becoming apparent. The extensive anticyclone covering the eastern part of the country has continued its eastward movement and the area of highest pressures now appears as a wedge in the Atlantic Ocean extending from latitude 42, longitude 60, southwestward into Florida, with highest pressure reported at Jacksonville, 1026.1 millibars (30.30 inches). The disturbance that was in the southwest last night has moved northeastward, while developing in intensity and is now centered over South Dakota with lowest pressure reported at Pierre, 997.0 millibars (29.44 inches). The trough associated with this disturbance, extending southward into New Mexico, separates the comparatively cold air in the western part of the country from the unseasonably warm air in the eastern part of the country. In the past 24 hours light to moderate rains have occurred in New England, the northern Great Lakes, the northern Mississippi Valley, the Great Plains States, and in the Rocky Mountain regions, while some heavy rains and snows have been reported in the northern Rocky Mountains.

Local Weather Report

Easter Traffic Crashes Send 15 to Hospitals

Collisions on the traffic-jammed highways to Washington yesterday sent 15 persons to hospitals. A number of others received first-aid treatment.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper, 58, of Louisville, Ky., wife of George Cooper, who identified himself at Emergency Hospital as president of the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co., sustained a fractured shoulder when the automobile in which she was riding stopped abruptly in heavy traffic near Washington Airport.

Two Bolling Field enlisted men were injured seriously near Frederick, Md., when their automobile crashed into a concrete culvert. They were Theodore L. Ohshefski, who suffered a broken ankle and head injuries, and Francis Truskwski, whose right leg and jaw were fractured. They were transferred to Walter Reed General Hospital in an Army ambulance.

Gale Bishop, 22 months, of Philadelphia, received severe lacerations of the forehead and a possible fracture of the skull when he was struck by an automobile when he stepped into the street in the 1600 block of West Virginia Avenue Northeast. Police said the automobile was operated by James L. Luber, 18, of 2939 Mills Avenue Northeast.

Robert Bohanan, 4, of 739 Eleventh Street Southeast, was struck in front of his home by an automobile operated, according to police, by Michael K. Linck, 2016 T Street Southeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for a brain concussion.

Four people were injured when an automobile police said was operated by Carman B. Knox, 43, of Friendship Station, Md., struck a parked machine in the 4300 block of Reno Road. They were the driver, lacerated chin and hip; Mrs. Antonin Morrin, 75, of Friendship Station, severe scalp lacerations; Louise Morrin, 62, of Friendship, possible fracture of the left leg, and Adrian M. Sers, 42, of Philadelphia, severe lacerations of both legs.

Silas Dockery, 25, of Silver Spring, Md., was knocked down by an auto at Capitol Heights, Md., and treated at Casualty Hospital for concussion and a possible fracture of the skull. Clarence Simms, 41, colored, of Herndon, Va., suffered head injuries when his car collided with a tree at Forestville, Va. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Morris Soloman, 54, and his wife, Etta, 43, of Union City, N. J., were injured in a collision at Muirkirk, Md. They were taken to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. Mrs. Soloman suffered a left arm fracture and head cuts. Her husband was treated for face cuts and possible concussion.

Nineteen-year-old Nellie Virginia Baker, of 3118 Dumbarton Avenue Northwest, suffered face cuts, a left elbow fracture and possible injuries to the head when the car in which she was riding struck a pole at Wisconsin Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street Northwest. Police said the driver of the car was Herbert McReynolds, 19, of River Road, Md. Miss Baker was treated at Georgetown Hospital.

Roy Durham, jr., colored, 23, of Rochester, N. Y., was in the Montgomery County Hospital at Sandy Spring suffering from injuries sustained in a head-on collision at Henderson's Corner on the Rockville to Frederick road. Mary Dunnington, 65, of 3215 Newark Street Northwest, was treated by a private physician for head injuries suffered in the same accident and four other persons were given first-aid treatment at the scene by members of the Gaithersburg Rescue Squad.

Durham was a passenger in an automobile driven by Robert Beckley, colored, of Rochester, and the woman was in a car driven by Miss Evelyn Slater, 3600 Thirteenth Street Northwest, according to Montgomery County police.

William Boswell, 37, Pomonkey, Md., suffered a compound leg fracture when struck by an automobile late Saturday night a mile east of Pomonkey. State Trooper D. F. Hall took the injured man to Casulty Hospital. Senry E. Wills, colored, 31, of Faulkner, Md., was charged with failing to stop after an accident. He was released on bond.

Italian-Uniformed Ethiopians Protest Loyalty to Selassie

By Godfrey Anderson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Addis Ababa, April 11 (Delayed).—Thousands of Ethiopians, with their shamas wrapped about them, watched today as princes and chieftains prostrated themselves before Haile Selassie and protested their allegiance to the Emperor at his headquarters about 100 miles from this capital city.

Wearing the khaki uniform of an Ethiopian field marshal, Selassie sat at the top of a flight of steps overlooking his headquarters' courtyard. From a mast fluttered the green, yellow and red royal standard of the Lion of Judah, which bears Selassie's title of "King of Kings."

In the courtyard, hundreds of warriors wearing Italian uniforms waited to offer themselves to the service of the Emperor.

From time to time, the Emperor used field glasses to study the approach of some of the 6,000 men who were snaking their way across a plain hundreds of feet below the town.

Protest Loyalty

The men scrambled up a hill to the town already crammed with armed warriors, rushed forward with rifles raised aloft and threw themselves at Selassie's feet, crying that they were loyal to him the Italians.

"Each day they come to ask pardon," Selassie said. "I forgive them, for I have great confidence even in the loyalty of those who once betrayed me."

When all 6,000 men had reached the town and prostrated themselves before the emperor, Coptic priests wearing yellow turbans and walking beneath red umbrellas held a religious service.

War drums had throbbed through this town yesterday when the news was spread that the Emperor's heir, Crown Prince Asfa Wosan, had entered Ethiopia again.

Crown Prince Joins Father

The crown prince and his younger brother joined their father as a special mission of British officers journeyed toward Addis Ababa, which their troops recently captured from the Italians.

The princes with a small suite trekked through the blistering heat of the Sudan desert to reach their father's headquarters.

I traveled with the British, who preserved tradition even while in the wild country.

An old Etonian captain, who will administer the courts of Addis Ababa, had his native servant lay out his clothes for dinner after his evening bath in the Nile River.

Piles of stores surrounded the adjoining camps of the British mission and Ethiopian princes.

The biggest case contained the emperor's ornate saddle on which he may soon ride into Addis Ababa. One battered suitcase was crammed with European toys for the emperor's grandchildren.

James Roosevelt Will Marry Today; Waits for Mother

Hollywood, April 13 (INS).—Capt. James Roosevelt and Romelle Theresa Schneider tonight made final plans for their wedding tomorrow afternoon at the Beverly Hills home of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Converse.

The ceremony will be performed at 1 p. m. (P. S. T.) unless the plane bringing Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt from Washington is late. In that event the wedding also will be delayed, Capt. Roosevelt said.

The civil ceremony will be performed by Municipal Judge Arthur S. Guerin before a small group of friends.

Maurice Benjamin, Hollywood attorney, will be best man and Benjamin's wife, Doris, will be matron of honor. Miss Schneider will be given in marriage by her brother, George, Notre Dame University student.

Other members of the wedding party will include Capt. Roosevelt's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, of Seattle; Mrs. Agnes Schneider, the bride's mother, and Miss Schneider's sister, Phyllis.

Lincoln Lured Some of the Crowd Some of the Time

In a strange rivalry for attention between the rugged stone face of Abraham Lincoln, in his memorial, and the bright gay cherry blossoms honest Abe didn't come out badly this past weekend.

He drew as good crowds as the blossoms; in fact he broke a record for all time Saturday when 52,193 persons visited the memorial, the guards said yesterday.

The previous high, they said, was about ten years ago, on an Easter when 48,000 visitors came to visit his greatest shrine. There was a falling away yesterday to approximately 40,000, possibly attributable to the difficulties of traffic.

OPM Eases Curb On Civilian Use Of Aluminum

The Office of Production Management last night modified its mandatory priorities order on aluminum to free additional supplies of low-grade aluminum not suited for defense production to civilian industries.

OPM Priorities Director Edward R. Stettinius told producers that non-defense consumers could be allotted increased supplies ranging from 20 to 40 per cent of present deliveries, depending on the nature of the product manufactured.

Protests from labor and management groups that limited supplies of the low grade aluminum was forcing many factories to close, prompted yesterday's action.

Ickes Brands Lindbergh No.1 Nazi Dupe

Chicago, April 13 (AP).—Secretary Harold Ickes declared tonight that "Hitler's unconscious tools" in this country "serve him to better purpose than those in his actual pay."

In a written address at a Passover celebration of the Jewish National Workers Alliance of America, Ickes mentioned several public figures by name and declared:

"Isn't it about time that some of these fellows should wake up to the fact that they are playing Hitler's game; that they are either Hitler's conscious tools or dupes, that they are lending aid and comfort to the enemies of democracy—to those who would enslave them and theirs?"

He referred also to "our Nazi fellow travelers" who, he asserted, "have well learned the Goebbels technique of spreading confusion, fomenting misunderstandings, and appealing to race and religious prejudices."

The Nazi fellow travelers," he said, "pretend as they may . . . wish to see Hitler successful and victorious because "they fear that a defeat of Nazlism would mean a resurgence of true democracy throughout Europe and the world."

Names Lindbergh

He declared that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was "the No. 1 United States Nazi fellow traveler" and that "every act of his and every word . . . proves that he wants Germany to win."

"It would seem that he prefers fascism to democracy; that he is indifferent to liberty, agrees with Hitler that Christian civilization is decaying, and condones, if he does not actually applaud, the brutalities of which the Nazi ideology has already been guilty."

Ickes asserted that "another, apparently a fellow traveler, is Gen. Robert E. Wood," who is national chairman of the America First Committee, which Ickes referred to throughout his speech as the "American next committee."

Gen. Wood, he declared, "is wittingly or unwittingly, stooging for Hitler."

"They are a queer assortment, these Nazi fellow travelers," he declared. "For instance, in this group you find good old liberals, such as Oswald Garrison Villard; decent Socialists, such as Norman Thomas; well-meaning laborites, such as J. J. Muste."

The "Nazi fellow travelers," he said, "have their own organizations, probably the most important of which is the America 'next' committee.

Accuses Leaders

"Among the active supporters of the America 'next' committee are such men as Hugh S. Johnson, Hanford MacNider, Henry Ford, Ernest Weir and Gen. Robert E. Wood. I suppose it would be difficult to find a collection of worse reactionaries than these."

He added that "the tie-up between the America 'next' committee and professional Fascists and anti-Semites is clear and scandalous."

Ickes declared that the Chicago Tribune "is hailed with joy both in Berlin and Rome, and with good reason," for its editorial policies.

Referring again to "fellow travelers," he said that "we shall continue to watch those whom we know and expose others whom we discover lurking in the dark places."

"We know that a negotiated peace is impossible now," Ickes said. "We know that a peace imposed on the democracies by Hitler would be horrible to contemplate. The only peace that can be real and lasting will be on established by the democracies."

2 Clubs Hold Hikes

Two hiking clubs got away from the crowd-of-it-all yesterday. The Wanderbirds went into Rock Creek Park, followed Piney Branch to Rock Creek, Miller's Cabin and then out to Kalmia Road. The Capital Hiking Club followed an 8-mile trail along Goose Creek, under the Potomac bluff.

Catholics' New English Bible Calls Jonah's Whale a Fish

By the Associated Press

New York, April 13.—The Catholic hierarchy announced today that a new English edition of the New Testament, highly simplified and modernized, would be published on May 18, "Biblical Sunday."

Approved by the pontifical Biblical commission, the first revision in 190 years is the product of five years' work by scholars in the original Semitic, Greek and Latin scriptures. It is based on the ancient Latin vulgate and the Challoner-Rheims text and will be called the Confraternity Edition.

The Episcopal Committee of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine said that to meet the needs of a living, changing language it was necessary to eliminate many of the characteristics of older English editions—the original Rheims and Douay version of 1582 and Bishop Challoner's revision in London in 1750.

Among the radical departures in style are the use of paragraphs, quotation marks, copious explanatory notes, standardized punctuation and Webster's preferred spelling. Small letters are used for pronouns referring to God; and the use of capitals has been curtailed except for purposes of clarity. Verse was abandoned for paragraphing.

Most prominent among changes in the text are elimination of many archaic forms and phrases. While "thou" and "thee" were retained, third person singular verb forms, such as hath, doth and runneth, are modernized. Among changes of this category are:

"Listened" for "gave ear"; "had to" for "was of necessity to"; "I have the right" for "it is meet for me"; "brothers" for "brethren"; "indeed" for "verily"; "as" for "forasmuch as"; "girl" or "maid" for "damsel"; "paralytic" for "ill of the palsy"; and "you" for "ye."

The famous old phrase "gave up the ghost" has become "died," because usage has altered the meaning. Thus "traffic" has become "business"; "expound has become "explain."

Because of changing connotations "prevaricator" of the old text has been changed to "sinner"; "ancients" to "elders"; "seduce" to "cheat"; "babes" to "little ones"; "belly" to "stomach"; "sober" to "sane"; and "mean" to "lowly."

Several erroneous and confused translations have been corrected. "Awake, ye just!" has become "Awake as you should;" and "The Spirit Liveth" has been chnaged to "The spirit is life."

Idioms of other languages which crept into earlier texts have been worthy of his hire" has been retranslated into present-day English. For clarification, "Laborer is changed to "Laborer deserves his wage;" "evil eye" to "jealousy;" "in my name" to "for my sake;" "all flesh" to "all mankind;" "ends of the world" to "final age of the world;" "His bowels are more abundantly toward you" to "His affection for you is all the more abundant;" "Inflameth the wheel of our nativity" to "setting on fire the course of our life;" and "faint" to "lose heart."
